Historic names are associated with our colonial fron industry. Mordecal Lincoln of Scituate, Mass., from whom Abraham Lincoln was directly descended, was the principal owner as early as 1701, in company with his brother, Daniel L. ncoln, or the Bound Brook fron works, Augustin Washington, was engaged in the manufacture. logton, was engaged in the manufacture of pig iron at Accokeek Furnace, in Stat-ford county, Virginia, at the time George Washington was born. His iron interests were continued in the Washington fam-ily down to the revolution.

The great progress that has been made in late years in this country in the construction of sicel bridges and in the substitution or iron and sicel for wood in the crection of public and private buildings, particularly the very high buildings that are now to be seen in all our large cities, could not have taken place if our iron and steel manufacturers had not first demonstrated their ability to produce the structural forms required and at low prices.

The manufacture of wire rope is another leading branch of our steel-wire industry and so also has been the manufacture of telegraph and stelephone wire. Electric railways, too, require large quantities of steel wire. We did not make the steel for these articles until after 189. The wire cables for the Brooklyn bridge, which was completed in 1883, were made of American steel.

It may be doubted whether many persons realize the magnitude of the steel-wire industry of this country. The 5,681,801 kegs of wire nails manufactured in 1881 were the equivalent of 23,652 tons. Almost as many tons of steel wire for fencing are also annually produced.

Several signers of the declaration were colonial iron manufacturers, as were also two of the most notable officers of the continental army. General Nathaniel Greene and Colonel Ethan Allen. In 1742 Benjamin Franklin invented the Franklin stove, which is still in use in some old Pennsylvania houses.

Ten years ago the making of heavy armor plates was an untried industry in this country but today our heavy armor plates are admitted to be the best in the world and within the last year the Russian government has purchased American armor plates in preference to those made in European establishments.

It was not until near the end of the first quarter of the present century that we made any considerable quantity of nails with the cut-nail machines with which the present generation is familiar Until 1883 all our cut nails were made of iron but in that year we began to make them of beasemer steel and in the same year steel-wire nails began to come into use as a substitute for cut nails.

Then Daby was sick, we gave her Castoria. When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria, When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria. When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.
