has kept more men steadily employed thus far this winter than any office in the city. This alone speaks well for its achievement in the midst of the annoyance of moving a plant like that of The Tribune. But we refer more especially to its mechanical demands, and while its facilities have been used to fill orders for towns within a radius of twenty miles, it has met all its demands and given satisfaction. You can aid us to keep these honest tollers steadily engaged by sending your work to our office, and thereby make happy mechanic who prefers steady employment to uncertainty.

Speaking further on of the encampment he says: "We had brigade guard and brigade guard mount, in accordance with drill regulations and manual of guard duty of the United States army, Each regimental adjutant was in turn required to officiate. They were zeal-ous and thoroughly up in all the re-quirements, and met every point of pre-scribed duty as the week progressed, and the defects were observed. The guard was a brignde guard, detailed from each regiment, with never more than three men from a company, and yet, in the report of the inspector gen-eral the rating for guard duty is by company, without any single company having been on guard or in a position to be inspected in the duties thereof."

Mrs. Rorer Makes Some Emphatic Statements About Olive Oil.

The Lecturer and the Dealer Could Not Agree with Each Other's Views. lle Wanted the Statement Qualified-Some Recipes.

Rorer yesterday afternoon was attended by as large a class as on the preceding day, which was rather unexpected ing day, which was rather unexpected owing to the severe snow storm and disagreeable weather. The large audience on such a day was perhaps as good an evidence of the popularity of the school as could have been given. It happened that the class was to hear a very remarkable and emphatic statement concerning bogus olive oils. What Mrs. Rorer said about the matter was not long in reaching the ears of E. G. Coursen, who has furnished free of charge all the groceries and other cook-ing materials which are included in his stock and he lost no time in seeking an explanation from the lecturer. Mrs. Rorer's statement was to the effect that pure olive oil is not to be found on sale in grocery stores and that it is rarely to be found in jobbling houses. Import-ed oils from France, she averred, are obtained from California and are not obtained from Cantornia and are not shipped back to this country until they have been blended with cotton-seed or other oils, perfectly harmless in themselves but a cheap adulteration. She remarked further that for the Phil-adelphia school she was able to procure rune oil only by buying it dieset from pure oil only by buying it direct from the presses in California at $5.50 per gallon and then had to pay expressage. If others would not go to this trouble and expense to get the pure article, she advised them to ask for cotton-seed oil, for which only 25 cents per large bottle is charged. Otherwise the grocer would charge them 75 cents for the same thing but labelled as pure olive oil. The cotton-seed oil, she said, an-swers the purpose of the olive product

MR. COURSEN'S OIL. It so happens that Mr. Coursen has an oil which he guarantees as absolutey pure and on which he has a large trade. As a very large number of those present at the lecture were Mr. Cour-sen's customers he felt that Mrs. Rorer had done his business an injury and he hastened around to the room on Washington avenue to have the state-ment qualified. The lecture had been finished; many of the members of the class were near the street door, and Mrs. Rorer was the street door, and Mrs. Rorer was alone and engaged in writing in the rear of the room. What ensued was heard by only a few. Mr. Coursen had in his hand a bottle of oil purchased from his store and which as to have been used in making salad dressing. It had not been uncorked as the dressing was not included in the lecture, and another cheaper brand of oil was utilized in the frying parts of the les-

He asserted that he paid $3.50 more per dozen for his brand of oil than for the same number of bottles of so-called pure olive oil. Its qualify he said was guaranteed and imported as pure and was sold as such. He averred that Mrs. Rorer was mistaken in her statement that nure olive oil could not be a better for heat and trousers, rushed him through the door. That was not the end. Mrs. Rorer said she had traveled this country and Europe and had been able to buy pure oil only as it dripped from the press and she would have to have a chemical analysis made of the Coursen article before she would be satisfied as to its purity.

So the episode ended. Neither of the participants ended the talk in the best possible frame of mind. the following recipes were given by Mrs. Rorer during the afternoon:

beaten. The sauce is especially fine for sweethreads, chickens, cutlets and baked or boiled fish.

Tomato Sauce—One pint of stewed tomatoes, one tablespoonful of butter, one tablespoonful of butter, one tablespoonful of flour, one small onion, one hay leaf, one sprig of parsley, one blade of mace, sait and pepper to suit the taste. Put the tomatoes on the fire with the onion, bay leaf, parsley and mace, and simmer slowly for ten minutes. Melt the butter, addit to the flour; mix until smooth. Press the tomatoes through a sleve, add them to the butter and flour, stir continually until it boils, add sait and pepper and it is ready to use. This may be served with chops, fillet or broiled steak.

Tomato Aspic—Cover one-fourth box of gelatin with one-fourth cup cold water, soak ten minutes. Strain half can of tomatoes, add a slice carrot chopped, one slice of parsley, one bay leaf, teaspoonful lemon juice, one of sait and fi quarter teaspoonful of pepper. Stir until boiling: add gelatin; strain and turn into small fancy mold and stand away and harden. Serve cold on lettuce leaves, with mayonaise dressing. This will take the place of a salad course, in fact is a most beautiful salad for supper or lunch.

Cream Horseradish Sauce—Press four tablespoonfuls of horseradish from the vinegar, add half teaspoonful salt, yolk of one egg; mix and add four tablespoonfuls of cream whipped to a stiff froth.

GATHERED HERE AND THERE.

Various reasons have been suggested as prompting A. W. Dickson in his efforts to create a reform in the traction com-pany service. One of the reasons sug-gested is an incident which recently occurred on the Laurel Hill park line; any-how, it very well illustrates Mr. Dickson's Impulsiveness and shows what happened to a drunken passenger who insulted him It was during the early evening. Mr Dickson was aboard the car, outwardbound, and was accompanied by two la-dies. A big, strapping man, much the worse for liquor, stumbled into the car and seated himself. He was in a pugna-cious humor and lost no time in expressing his ability to whip the conductor, motorman or anybody else-he was not par-ticular, he said. He leered at Mr. Dickson across the car, and, being met with a steady and angry gaze, informed Mr. Dickson that he could whip the life out of him. He pulled out his watch which he offered to wager on his prowess. A string of ouths accompanied the talk addressed to Mr. Dickson.

Until this point the board of trade en-thusiast had kept control of his temper on account of the ladies who were with him. But the oaths were more than he could stand and he requested the conduc-tor to put the man off the car. The conductor replied:
"Say, Mr. Dickson, he's a tough one—that fellow. I ain't a' goin' to risk gettin' killed; I'd like to do w'at yer ask me, but I can't. The trate Mr. Dickson made no reply, but re-entered the car where the drunken tough was folling about and rippling off oaths by the yard. He grasped the fight-grip on the collar and trousers, rushed him through the door. That was not the end. Gaining the platform, there was no halting for breath. A limp form rose in the air and deposited itself on the street, in the wake of the car and the form was not Mr. Dickson's. The car was moving rapidly at the time. It was that same night and within an hour after the episode is reported as having happened that a big, but sober, man in a bad state of repair reached the Lackawanna hospital and had several wounds dressed. He refused to tell how he had been injured.

William Edgar Nye, the humorist, who passed away a few days ago, had no more ardent admirer than Attorney T. V. Pow-Boudins a la Reine-One pint of cold cooked chicken, chopped fine; one table spoonful of butter; two tablespoonfuls of has been a warm friendship for nearly fried bread crumbs; one-half cup of stock spoonful of butter; two tablespoonfuls of dried bread crumbs; one-half cup of stock or boiling water; two eags; one-quarter nutmer, grated; one tablespoonful of chepped parsley; salt and pepper to taster put the butter in a frying-pan to melt and add to it the bread crumbs and stock; stir until it boils. Take from the fire and add the chicken, parsley, nutmeg, salt and pepper, and then the eggs slightly beaten; mix thoroughly. Fill the tex or custard cups two-thirds full of this mixture, stand in a baking pan half filled with boiling water and bake in a moderate oven twenty minutes. When done, turn them out carefully on a bested dish and the same a household word. He with boiling water and bake in a moderate oven twenty minutes. Bechamel Sauce-One tablespoonful of butter; gill of stock, two dashes of pepper one tablespoonful of four; one gill of cream, yolk of one egg, one-half teaspoonful of sait. Melt the butter without browning and then add the flour, mix until smooth add the stock and cream, stir continually until it bolls; take from the fire, add the sait, pepper and the yolk of the egg well beaten. The sauce is especially fine for sweetbreads, chickens, cutlets and baked or boiled fish. The humorist was then in splendid health and his death a few days ago was a sad and unexpected shock to Mr. Powderly.
