The auction sale at the Japanese Fair, 227 Washington avenue, which began Tuesday at 2.30 in the afternoon and 7.30 in the evening, was the beginning of one of the most exceptional auction sales ever held in Scranton.

Mr. Stern, who has recently returned from Japan, made the afternoon quite enjoyable by relating about the wonderful art of the Japanese, giving the names of the different wares and describing the decoration of every article sold, as well as showing the wonderful skill and ingenuity with which they pack the goods in rice straw, proving to the audience how impossible it was to repack and transfer the goods after once removed from the original pack-ages. For that reason the goods were

There is nothing in the statutes now in the local ordinances designating when the chief engineer's term shall begin or expire. All the law says is that he shall serve for one year. Chief Ferber therefore will be appointed for a year beginning March 22, on which date his present year's term expires. He cannot be removed except for cause until March 22, 1897, and unless he re-

It is an office which has been filled as a rule, to suit the pleasure of the fire department and as Chief Ferber is in all probability the choice of the firemen for the position it would not be surprised in the Democrate who sayirs to such ing if the Democrats who aspire to suc-ceed him would be compelled to wait a

SERMON AT CATHEDRAL.

Delivered by the Rev. W. P. O'Donnell of the North End.

Rev. W. P. O'Donnell, of the North End, preached the sermon at St. Peter's cathedral last evening. He is an elo-quent speaker and clothes his thoughts quent speaker and clothes his thoughts in language noted for its elegance and simplicity. He makes frequent use of figures of speech, that illustrate clearly and forcefully the subject at hand His text was "Judge not from appear-ances, but judge a just judgment," St. John, 7:xxiv.

John, 7:xxiv.

Rev. Father O'Donnell's discourse began with a beautiful similitude. He likened the snares that satan throws out to lure souls to everlasting death to the boy with his bird-lime and decoy, satching blids and carring them. The to the boy with his bird-lime and decoy, catching birds and caging them. The boy shuts the bird up in a cage, but does not neglect it. He gives it food and drink and fresh air, and does everything to make the little creature sing and be happy. Some men catch birds and unmercifully kill them for the gain which they get. These men adopt the means to catch the birds in like manner as the boy does. They throw out of the distribution of the health of the human body and the health of the human body and cited the kinds that are disease-breed-ing. She urged the use of Pastuerized milk in the cases of cholera infantum ner as the boy does. They throw out the decoy and entrap the feathered songsters, some times by placing other and similar troubles, as the process is so regulated as to destroy only the mi-crobes harmful to the system and to

The speaker exhorted his hearers not to be swayed by this specious glitter of the world. These are only the temptations of the devil to capture souls and like the bird catcher deals with his birds, to put them to death. St. Paul teaches the good Christian to work for the hereafter, the eternity with God, and to disregard the corporal advancement of ourselves. It is only by prayer and penance that we can work out our salpenance that we can work out our sal-vation.

In conclusion the speaker urged that our time here should not be devoted to bartering the things of eternal life for the pleasures and follies of this world, which after a few short years must fade away.

NO CAUSE OF ACTION.

IN HONOR OF EMMET.

John Mitchel Club Celebrates the Anniversary of the Irish Patriot and

Owing to the inclement weather the attendance last night at the Robert Emmet celebration was quite small as compared with previous years, but not-withstanding this the enthusiasm was bountiful enough to repay the John Mitchell club for the efforts they put forward to feelingly commemorate the day. Senator J. C. Vaughan presided and announced the various numbers.

The evening's programme was opened with a rollicking Irish song, "Roger O'Malley," rendered by E. J. McIntyre so acceptably that he was vigorously encored. He showed his versatility by responding with a sentimental Scotch song. Miss Rose Bradley, a very en-tertaining little Miss, recited "The Shamrock of Erin" and the same ob-ject was the theme of the next song, in which M. J. Coyne's sweet voice was heard to good advantage. For a well merited encore he responded with another Irish song.

ATTORNEY REGAN'S ADDRESS. Attorney J. D. Regan then delivered a learned address, appropriate to the occasion. Irishmen, he said, have had to contend against the Orangemen for years, and they are still their greatest foes. "We celebrate tonight." he said. "the memory of one who had his head cut off by Orangemen. Protestant-Irishmen are not Orangemen. There is not a spark of religion in Orangemen. An Irishman loves his religion with a profound and lasting love, but he hates no other man's religion. He can love a Protestant patriot with as great a zeal as he can a Catholic patriot and this gathering tonight is a proof of that."
A vocal duett by Misses Rose and Emma Bradley was next given and was liberally applauded. Then Miss Mame Boland recited in a very excellent man-ner Hon. John E. Barrett's touching "The Soldier's Monument," earned for her an encore.

versatile entertainer. First he gave a song and an response to repeated encores he gave, in turn a dance, a song, a recitation and another song.
Frank J. Johnson was next introduced. He said in brief: "Wherever there is an Irishman tonight, be he Catholic or Protestant, you will find him honoring the memory of Protest-ant Robert Emmet. We take pleasure

Michael Donnegan, who was next in-troduced proved to be a clever and time of necessity.' Mr. Johnson reviewed the condition of Ireland and the causes which led to it, and closed by saying that Irishmen everywhere should and do resolve that when the opportunity presents itself Emmet's epitaph shall be written and the nation for which he died shall once more be given her station among the nations of the earth."

THE OTHER FEATURES. By request Miss Boland recited "Ireland, I Bid You the Top O' the Morning," and was again encored. M. J. Coyne again appeared and rendered a solo on the ocarina, then a medley on the same instrument, then in responsto another encore gave a flute solo, and when the audience insisted on more gave them another song. The performance concluded with a double phigogue solo by E. J. McIn-
