CLASSIC ORGAN RECITAL.

Given Under Professor Pennington's Direction in Elm Park Church.

A large audience in Elm Park church last night was treated to an excellent rendition of a very classic music program under the direction of J. Alfred Pennington, the church organist.

It was his third organ recital. He was assisted by Theodore Hemberger, violinist, and the Elm Park quartette, Miss Winifred Sullivan, soprano; Miss Elsie Vandevort, contralto; Alfred Wender, tenor; and Richard Thomas, basso.

The number which especially appealed to the music lovers present was a suite in A minor, played by Mr. Hemberger and accompanied by Mr. Pennington. It is a creation of Sinding, a Norwegian, of whom it is said, "He is a man who belongs to the strong ones of this earth. Ruggedness, a certain grandeur and largeness of utterance, an absolute control of the technical material of his art distinguishes Sinding's work." The other numbers were very favorably received.

GREAT DIAMOND ROBBERY.

Best Production of Melodrama Ever Seen in This City.

THE GREAT DIAMOND ROBBERY.

The days of "heroic" robberies of recent years has made melodrama a word and not a deed, and the very mention of it jars on the nerves of the theater-goer who has seen the desperate stage deeds of the desperado stage villains of the past.

THE GREAT DIAMOND ROBBERY.

Quite a different type is "The Great Diamond Robbery," which a large audience saw and justly appreciated at the Academy theater.

THE GREAT DIAMOND ROBBERY.

The story of the melodrama is laid in the New York of today and was worked out and written by Edward M. Alfriend and A. C. Wheeler, who have filled the cast of the play with real people who speak lines much as people in everyday life do.

THE GREAT DIAMOND ROBBERY.

The story is one of absorbing interest, is told with the true instinct as to dramatic effects and holds the audience enthralled during the six acts of the play.

THE GREAT DIAMOND ROBBERY.

The melodrama is good, the scenery and accessories laid out in the company that carries "The Great Diamond Robbery" to triumph.

THE GREAT DIAMOND ROBBERY.

The announcement that the latter had left the company was a mistake. She was in the cast last night and did a splendid work in the scene.
