When a people are so constantly taxed for charitable purposes as they are in this city it is somewhat embarrassing to come before the public for help. But the great need of our people compels me to add one more appeal. I know of no causs which deserves your sympathy and help any more than tile one. Our people have a good lot, 63 by 129 feet, with a small church building and parsonage on it. But the location is very had, it being on an alley, hemmed in on all sides, mostly by stables, and in bad weather it is very inconvenient to get to the church. Now, what our people need and, what they want to do if possible is to sell this property and buy a lot in a convenient place on the atreet, and build a church with some of the modern improvements, which are so necessary for social and charitable as well as spiritual work. I appeal to the good people of Scranton, o help us in this most worthy cause. I know of no city where is more charitable work done than there is here and where there is more money given through the churches and by private contributions to help my people in the south. For this I feel very grateful and this encourages me to appeal to you to help my people here at home. A very little investigation will convince you that they need it.

There are but few of our people in Scranton; barely enough to support a church, and all being laboring people they are unable to build without your help. Hence I appeal to you in their behalf.

They will hold a raily in the church Sunday, March 29, at which time they will give themselves and their friends an opportunity to help them. Any amount which you may give will be thankfully received. Any amount that you may send to the pastor will be duly acknowledged. A soliciting committee will be appointed soon, whose names will be published in the city papers.

I make this appeal to you in the name of our dear Heavenly Father, whose world. Resper and am doing linely.

As far as grandeur and sublimity are concerned the consecration will rival the recent jubilee of Bishop O'Hara, which will be ever memorable Much enthusiasm is being shown over the coming production of "The Messiah," which is to be sung Monday, April 6, in the Frothingham. The Choral union, under the conductorship of Haydn Evans, is working very energetically, and it is expected that their singing will be a music treat.

The 150 singers are very enthusiastic. This question is asked daily: "Is the Choral union to be a permanent organization?" This depends, it is said, on the support which will be given the choir at their initial performance. The singers say Scranton can and should in the history of the diocese. Following is a description of the forms observed in the consecration of a observed in the consecration of a bishop:

No one is to be consecrated unless first the consecrator shall be sure of the commission to consecrate, either by apostolic letters, if he be outside the Roman curia, or by verbal commission given by the Sovereign Pontiff to the consecrator, if the consecrator himself be a cardinal. The day chosen for consecration should be a Sunday or a feast day of one of the apostles, or it may be even a feast day if the Sovereign Pontiff shall have made this special concession, and it is fitting that both the consecrator and the elect should fast on the preceeding day. If the consecration be performed outside the Roman curia it should be held in the diocese to which the bishop-elect has been promoted, or within the province, if it can be conveniently done.

In the church where the consecration is to take place two chapels are prepared—a larger one for the consecration bishop or cardinal, and a smaller one for the bishop-elect. And in the larger, upon the altar, prepared in the usual manner, a cross is placed in the midde and at least four candlesticks are used. On the ground at the foot of the altar, carpets are laid, upon which the bishop-elect shall prostrate himself, but the consecrator and the others shall kneel. In an adjacent and suitable place a credence (a small table beside the altar), for the consecrator is also prepared, upon which will be a clean cloth, two candlesticks, bashis and towels for the ablution of the hands, a vessel, with holy water, and an aspersorium (the sprinkle) and a thurtble (censer), with spoon and incense, if the office is sung, otherwise this is omitted; cruets with wine and water, for the sacrillee, a chalice, the box of hosts, crumbs of bread for cleaning the hands and holy chrism. Furthermore all the vestiments of color suitable to the time and office of the mash—namely, sandals and amice, alb, cincture, pectoral cross, stole tunic, dalmatic gloves, chasuble, mitre, pontifical ring, pastoral staff, maniple and gremial.

ORNAMENTS USED BY BISHOPS

ORNAMENTS USED BY BISHOPS.

ORNAMENTS USED BY BISHOPS.

These are the ornaments used by bishops when they officiate solemnly: The pectoral cross is an elaborate gold ornament filled with relies of the martyrs, and reminds the wearer of the Savior who died for him and the martyrs who sealed their faith with their blood.

The ring is the sign of the spiritual alliance existing between the bishop and his church. He wears it on the forefinger of his right hand. The consecrating prelate says to him when the ring is given: A mark of discretion and dignity, a sign of fidelity, that you may know how to be silent, regarding what ought to silent, to manifest what ought to be manifested, to bind what ought to be bound, to loose what ought to be loosed."

The mitre is intended to remind the bishop of his sacerdotal supremacy. It dates back to the old Mosaic law. The two bands that fail on the shoulders from the mitre are figurative of the Old and the New Testaments in which the bishop should have full knowledge.

The wearing of sandals is a preservation of the Roman senatorial foot covering adopted centuries ago. When not officiating, the bishop wears the ordinary footgear.

The crosier is emblematic of the bishop's gear.

The crosier is emblematic of the bishop's pastoral power, He lays the mitre and crosier aside when he ascends the altar during the celebration of mass.

The small tunic and dalmatic, the vestments of the deacon and sub-deacon, show that the bishop is invested with the plenitude of the priesthood.

As early as the eighth century the gloves formed a part of the episcopal garb. Like the slippers, they have a large cross embracient of them.

broidered on them.

The gremial is a piece of silk placed over the knees during a pontifical mass.

MUST HAVE THREE CHAPLAINS.

All these being at hand, a faldstool is prepared for the consecrator and three seats for the bishop-elect and the two assistant bishops, a missal and a pontifical. The consecrator must have at least three chaplains in surplice and two acolytes at the credence. In the smaller chapel for the bishop-elect, which should be distinct from the larger, an altar is prepared with a cross and two candlesticks, a missal and a pontifical, and all the pontifical vestments in white, as enumerated above, for the consecrator, and in addition to these a white cope; near the altar a small credence, with a clean cloth, vessels for washing the hands and crumbs for cleaning the hands. Eight small strips from two rolls of fine linen, cut in lengths through the middle, of which two are each six palms in length, are prepared, and at least eight candles, four of which are placed on the altar of the consecrating bishop, two upon his credence, and two upon the altar of the bishop, elect; a jewelled ring, to be blest and given to the bishop-elect, and an ivory comb. The comb is a very ancient liturgical article and is frequently referred to in the history of the church. The new bishop is anointed on the head and hands with holy chrism. The oil on the head and hands is cleansed off with bread crumbs, which are citterward burned and the comb is then used to re-arrange the hair.

At least two assistant bishops shall be present at the consecration, who are MUST HAVE THREE CHAPLAINS.

and the comb is then used to re-arrange the hair.

At least two assistant bishops shall be present at the consecration, who are clothed in the rochet (a linen garment resembling the surplice), the stole, amiles, cope and the plain white mitre, and each one has his pontifical. At a suitable hour the consecrator, the bishop-elect, the assistant bishops and the others who are to take part in the consecration, assemble at the church, and the consecrator, having prayed before the altar, ascendato his throne, if he is in his own diocese, or goes to his chapel, to the fallstool near the epistle side of the altar, and there is vested as usual.

PUTS ON HIS VESTMENTS.

PUTS ON HIS VESTMENTS.

The bishop-elect, with his assistant bishops, goes to his chapel and there puts on the necessary vestments—the amice, all, chiefure and the stole, crossed as it is by priests. The assistant bishops in the meantime put on the vestments as above. All being ready the consecrator goes to the middle of the altar and there sits on the faldstool with his back to the altar. The bishop-elect, vested and wearing his berstia, is led between the two assistant bishops vested and mitred, and when he comes before the consecrator, uncovering his head and profoundly bowing, he makes a reverence to him, the assistant bishops, with their mitres on, slightly inclining their heads.

Then they sit at a little distance from the consecrator; the senior assistant bishop sits at the right hand of the bishop-elect, the junior at his left, facing one another. When they shall have thus been seated, after a short pause, they rise, the bishop and the assistant bishops without their mitres.

The consecration is then begun by the reading of the Pope's mandate appointing the bishop-elect. He then kneels before the consecrator, and on the book of the Gospels takes the oath imparted to bishops. Then follows the examination, and after that the mass and the special acts of consecration.

There is no better remedy for the spring cold than the ever-popular, ever-effective Turkish bath, which purifies the skin, opens the pores and leaves the body in a healthy condition, able to resist disease of any kind. Scranton people are blessed with un-usually fine facilities in this line. Mr. Purcell's Turkish and Russian baths at 103 Linden street, Court House square, are probably unequaled in the state, outside of Philadelphia.
