The Sunday evening congregations contain a great many young people, with whom Mr. Jones is very popular.

WHY "PATAGONIA."

A correspondent asks "Why was the name 'Patagonia,' given to the lower section of Hyde Park." An old resident explains that in the early history of this section a party of several hundred men went from lower Hyde Park to Patagonia, South America, attracted to Patagonia, South America, attracted thither by the mining field and the alluring stipend offered to workmen. Because of this the name "Patagonia" was given to the homes they had left and it yet remains.

leaning of the Word of Bishop and Divine Institution of the Office. The word bishop is derived from the Greek episcopos, which was used by writers of the carliest age in the general sense of "overseer," and was spe-cially applied in later Greek to the officers whom the Athenians sent to subject states. In the LXX (E. g. Num. xxxi, 14; 2 Par. xxx, 12) episcopos is used for an officer or prefect of any kind. Christians adopted the word as the title of an ecclesiastical dignitary, with authority to rule a diocese as its with authority to rule a diocese as its chief pastor. It is therefore evident that a bishop is superior to ordinary priests and as defined by the council of Trent, his superiority is of divine institution. The divine institution of the episco pacy was the belief of the Anglican church, as well as the Catholic, for a long period of time, and never has the former formally cast off this belief. Protestants, generally, do not pretend to have bishops, or, if they have clergymen officiating in similar capacity, th do not attribute to them any authority further than that bestowed by the church. The word episkopos is first used in the Acts of the Apostles, xx. 28, where St. Paul says to the clergy of Ephesus: "Take heed to yourselves and to the whole flock, in which the Holy Ghost made you bishops." The contention of Protestant writers is that the Greek episkopes, or bishep and presbyter, were in the days of the apostles synonymous terms, and that they corresponded in grade of eclesiastical dignity to the ministers or clergymen of the present, and therefore conclude that there no bishops in the modern sense of the term.

BISHOP OF JERUSALEM. The following argument is advanced James the Less was bishop of Jerusa-lem: In the year 44, when St. Peter was released from prison, he desired information to be given to James and the brethren. At the apostolic council James delivers judgment ("wherefore I judge.") St. Paul, in his epistle to the Galatians, describes Judaizers from Jerusalem as "certain who came from James," thus naming the church by its bishop; in Acts xxi, 18, St. Paul is said to have made a formal visit to St. James and to his presbyters. Speaking on the question whether or not St James was bishop of Jerusalem, Dr Lightfoot, bishop of Durham, probably bishop is the successor of the apostles. Having received the sacrament of order in all its fullness, he can, like the apostles, confirm, ordain priests and consecrate other bishops. With reference to order, a bishop is as high as the pope himself. It is incumbent upon a bishop to bear witness to the faith and tradition of his predecessor and of his lock, together with many other duties, all of which rights he exercises in union with and submission to the See of Peter. Every priest throughout the diocese when saying mass, prays for the bishop by name in the Canon. In early times he was addressed as Most Holy, Most Blessed, Lord (dominus), Your Hollness (sanctitas tua). These titles are now reserved to the pope. A bishop is addressed by the pope as "venerable The ornaments and insignia of the office of a bishop are the pectoral cross small tunic, dalmatic, ring, mitre, crozier, gremiał, gloves, stockings, slip-pers, episcopal throne and pontifical estments. The pectoral cross is worn by the bishop on the breast and recalls to mind the custom of the first Christians, who always were a cross sus pended from the neck. The small tuniand dalmatic are the two ornaments peculiar to the sub-deacon and deacon and are worn by the bishop to show that he is clothed with the plenitude of the priesthood. The ring signifies the alliance which the bishop contracts with his church in his consecration gin of which dates back to the ancient law and signifies the royalty of the priesthood; the two pieces which hang down on the shoulders signify the old and new testaments, with both or which the bishop must be perfectly

The company received a twenty-year franchise, to be extended to thirty years if authority for the step could be secured.

It was once the custom that the metropolitan and two bishops could perform the ceremony of consecration. Now the consecration must be by the pope or a bishop specially commission-ed by him. Two other bishops assist the consecrator and by permission of the pope sometimes in place of the lat-ter mitred abbots or even ordinary priests are substituted. The ceremony should take place on a Sunday or feast of an aposile within three months of confirmation. THINGS ARE DIFFERENT NOW. A Story of Two Men Who linve Experienced Ups and Downs. From the Washington Star. Senator Mantle of Montana, Senator Dubols, of Idaho, and Patsey Clark, of Spokane, Wash., were walking down the avenues the other day when Mantle remarked: "Patsey, didn't I offer you some work one time many years ago, and didn't you refuse it?

"Yes," responded Patsey, "but I did not have to accept the offer." "Well, I don't know about that," con-tinued Mr. Mantle, "I have it in my mind that you really owe me some work. Then followed the story. Mantle: who is a telegraph operator, had a station out on the divide. This was many years ago. Patsey Clark and a number of fellows with him were going on farther west. They reached Mantie's place, and after some preliminary talk, they remained with him for the night. They did not exactly promise to cut up a lot of wood that Mantie had stacked up of wood that Mantie had stacked up for winter, but it was Mantie's under-standing that they would do so. In the morning they slipped away, leav-ing Mantie out their board and night's lodging. Since then both Mantie and Clark have prospered. Mantie is Unit-ed States senator and Patsey has a hole in the resumation Library has a hole to them.
