Mr. Sawyer came from Binghamton and his purpose is to give Scranton a representative escaolish-ment in keeping with those of the largest cities. He is thoroughly convers-ant with the art and has achieved a notable reputation.

The large display windows are gar-landed with smilax, ferns and plants arranged in most attractive style. The store is furnished in quartered oak, and the cases are fine specimens of cabinet handicraft.

An opening day is always a most pleasant epoch in the millinery trade. The varied novelties in trimming, flowers, shapes, designs and colors are presented to attract and in such manher as to make it easy for the intend-ing purchaser to select with readiness the style of a charming Easter bonnet. Sawyer's store is stocked with the completest line of domestic and imported millinery that money can secure. A visit to the store and an inspection of the grand assortment will convince on that a larger and handsomer variety of hats, trimmings and ornamentations has not been shown in this city.

The store is a large one and is arranged in convenient manner for the reception of visitors. The front part is taken up with the stock, and back of this is the women's parlor, finished in white and gold. The walls are covthroughout the place is fitted up in met-ropolitan style. Thousands passed in ind out yesterday.

Mr. Sawyer invites the women of Scranton to call and inspect his store and stock.

TOOK MONEY AND VALUABLES

Mrs. Salvi Is Practically Penniless-Sass Her Husband Fled on Account of Merolo Murder Case - Evidently Fears the Condemned Man

Joseph Salvi, the Old Forge barber who it is alleged instigated the murder of Emanuel Loro, fied for parts un-known yesterday, deserting his wife and robbing her of all her money and valuables and robbing her of all her money and valuables.

It is generally believed that Salvi feared that Merolo who is under sentence of death at the county jail, would make a confession which would implicate him in that most cold blooded murder and to escape the consequences he has departed for Italy. His alleged participation in the murder could not be proved although he was arrested twice as an accessory by County Detective Leyshon, who each time was frustrated in his efforts to have Salvi held through the failure of witnesses to but in an appearance.

As the story went at that time Salvi was the leader of a secret Italian so. was the leader of a secret Italian so-ciety and wishing to get rid of Loro who had set up an opposition barber shop at cheap prices, hired Merolo to clear him out.

Merolo who was a reckless dare-devil sort of a fellow picked a fight with Loro and shot him down in cold blood, firing five bullets into his body. Then he re-treated to Salvi's house, was given the money for which he agreed to do the murder and slipping out the back door made for the woods. SALVI WAS CHIEF WITNESS.

When Merolo was captured in Beston last fall and taken back here for trial Salvi was the principal witness against him. The only question for the jury to decide was whether or not the prisoner was Merolo.

This man, Salvi, who is one of the This man, Salvi, who is one of the most intelligent Italians in the valley willingly presented himself at the trial and with his wife and a big crowd of his people swore positively that Merolo committed the murder and that the prisoner was Merolo.

The prisoner up to the present day denies stoutly that he is Merolo but as his lawyers have given up the fight and death alone stares him the face, it is thought he will make a confession.

it is thought he will make a confession, in order that he may revenge himself on his traitorous friend. What adds color to this view of the case is that his wife says, openly, it is on account of the murder her husband has skipped Frothingham Frothingham.

Mr. Frothingham has been doing some thinking of late, and the results of this cogitation he expected would draw down upon his head the benedictions of the populace.

He expected that the citizens would ise up en masse and call him blessed; hat he would be heralded broadcast as the benefactor of the people. But all this is not thus. The law, without which he reckoned. tepped in and called a halt to his bene-

For many years the people of the city have been crying for a band stand, but their cries have availed them nothing. No one or ones could be induced to come up with the necessary wherewith to make the much desired stand a real-

Mr. Frothingham, while designing the new arcade, was struck with the idea of giving to the city the long desired boon and at the same time giving his theater entrance an up-to-date metropolitan appearance. So he drew up plans for a pretty portico to project over the sidewalk, to be supported by massive pillars set on the curb line, which would, in the first place, serve to beautify the entrance and protect thea-ter patrons coming from and going to their carriages; and, in the second place, as a band stand, it being his in-tention to have the roof of the portico fitted up for such a purpose.

KEPT THE MATTER A SECRET. That it might be a complete and glad-some surprise, he kept the matter a secret, purposing to plan the thing quietly and spring it on the unsuspectring public.

Yesterday was the time set for the surprise party, and at 7 o'clock in the morning his builders set to work and by noon the portico had assumed shape. At this hour an interruption came in the form of an order from Street Com-missioner, Kinsley that the portico be torn down, as it conflicted with the building ordinance. This was far from what Mr. Frothingham had expected, and to say that he was disgusted is putting it mildly. He ceased further operations, but told the street commissioner that he would see himself eternally condemned if he tore down the portico without a struggle. The street commissioner gave him to understand that if the portico wasn't down and the material removed within twenty-four-hours, that the city would tear it down.

Mr. Frothingham is a fighter from wayback, and some fun can be looked

It is his intention to have the case laid before councils tonight and to have a joint resolution passed permitting him to go ahead with the portico. HE WILL CAUSE TROUBLE.

HE WILL CAUSE TROUBLE.

If he doesn't get this permission he intends to have Mr. Kinsley explain why the Erie and Wyoming Valley Railroad company was permitted to build a portico, not only over the entire width of the sidewalk, but also over two feet of the street, and why the Hotel Jermyn cornice is allowed to project three feet or more over the sidewalk, and why the cornice of the new Gould and why the cornice of the new Gould building is permitted to project over the sidewalk and why it is that he in particular is singled out among all these violators of the ordinance in ques-
