WEST SIDE EVENTS.

R. J. Hughes, the Well Known Hardward Dealer, Retires-Viewing the Proposed Belt Line-Jottings.

West Side business men were surprised yesterday when dray wagons re-moved the goods from the hardware store of R. J. Hughes, who for a number of years past has been a prominent Main avenue business man. Investiga-tion proved that Mr. Hughes has retired from business. No announcement was made of the move and not a line has been written concerning the stereotyped "retiral sale." It is with regret that the people of the West Side bid adieu to Mr. Hughes. Financially, he has weathered every storm which has blighted his fellow dealers in hardware on this side. But his health was less fortunate. It was because of this that Mr. Hughes retired. He will now set-tle down and enjoy the fruit of labor.

ARRANGING A BELT LINE. A number of gentlemen representing the streets and bridges committee of the West Side board of trade and a similar committee from councils, met yesterday afternoon and inspected the route which is mentioned for the proposed belt line of the Traction com-pany. When approached as to the result of the meeting each of the viewers were as silent as the proverbial clam. All that could be learned was to the frect that the West Side will soon be given a great belt line, a system which will exterminate bad service. The gentlemen met at 3 o'clock on Ninth street. They traversed the thoroughfares now heling mentioned as the place for the belt. The outcome will be given at the next meeting of councils.

A PARK FOR SPORT.

An athletic park is promised as a fea-ture of the West Side future. A num-ber of young men who live in the Fifth ward are negotiating with Land Agent Freeman, of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western company, as to the leasing of a plot of ground on Washburn street, near the air shafts. A sub-scription has been started to obtain the necessary funds. Twenty dollars is tal of the land. If the air shaft site is abandoned the young men will secure a cheaper plot of ground further up the street. For this a rental of $15 is asked. Three base ball clubs t * 2e organized to play exclusively in . park during the coming season.

old Neptune Hand Engine Will Be House in a Barn on Hickory Street-Death of Mrs. Bridget Gaughan-

Quarters have been fitted up in a barn on Hickory street, near Cedar ave-nue, for the old Neptune hand engine, donated to the Volunteer Firemen's asociation by Dr. and Mrs. B. H. Thre The machine is prized as a relic and is now in Finch's works being burnished nd ornamented. Nearly two years ago came into possession of the association, and the most of that time it has been on the dry dock. The barn in which it will be housed is owned by harles Kaestner, and it will be guarded with great care. It was purchased thirty-five years ago for the Neptune Engine company. When more modern fire apparatus came in vogue in 1874 a new steamer was purchased and the relic was discarded. Philip Robinson, deceased, purchased it as a memento of the early days of the city, and from his estate it went to Dr. George S. Throop, also deceased, who paid for it to present it to the Volunteer association. But he died before he turned it over. His parents, Dr. and Mrs. B. H. Throop, wishing to carry out what their son had begun, conveyed it in his name. It is thought that the mahine will be taken over to its new home next week. Peter Robling, jr., of the Neptunes, is president of the asso-ciation; he and Isadore Goodman are the committee that has secured the barn for this purpose.

THE WORLD AGAINST HER.

Stirring Drama That Now Occupies the Boards at Davis' Theater.

"The World Against Her," a drama by Frank Harvey, was produced at Davis' theater yesterday afternoon and even-ing by Agnes Wallace Villa and comany. The drama is one in which Kate laxton met with great success, a success that has been repeated by gifted Mrs. Villa. The drama possesses a strong plot that is developed in a logical and interesting way which never permits the interest to fag. Mrs. Villa, in the role of Madge Carl-ton, does excellent work, and is par-ticularly strong in the emotional scenes where most actresses are weak. She never overacts, but gives to her char-acterization a reality and naturalness sterization a reality and naturalness that is refreshing.

THEIR ANNUAL BANOUET

Literary Young Men from the West Side Enjoy a Pleasant Evening.

MANY ELOQUENT ADDRESSES

Made by Those Who Were Assigned to Respond to the Various Toasts. Names of Those Who Attended the Event.

Young men forming an organization nown as the Hyde Park Literary and Debating society, banquetted last evening at the St. Charles hotel. It was the third annual repetition of the affair and was on a more pretentious scale than the former efforts. Last evening everything was pleasureable; even the toasts, the subject of which suggest conventionalism, were treated in an original way, which afforded genuine entertainment to the hearers.

The society is a prominent West Side organization. The officers are: Charles E. Daniels, president; Emerson D. Owen, vice president; W. A. Price, sec-retary; John Blume, treasurer, The society is literary in character and the aim is intellectual advancement. Last evening's banquet was in charge of a committee consisting of John R. D. Owen. The post prandial exercises were en-livened by the singing of a quartette and the musical selections of the Vail brothers. The latter gave a delightful entertainment with the mandolin and guitar. W. A. Price was toastmaster, In his introduction Charles E. Danlels paved the way for the toastmaster in a graceful manner Mr. Daniels spoke or "Our Society." He gave the history of the society; of its inception and its The society was organized by thirteen young men, two of whom were at the banquet last evening. "The society has paid us for its existence," said Mr. Daniels. "Members who spoke with broken sections. broken sentences can now harangue with ease. We have had our disap-pointments and our victories." In closing Mr. Daniels paid his compliments to the visitors of the evening. The efforts had a telling effect.

REMARKS OF TOASTMASTER. W. A. Price, the toastmaster, referred to the conspicuous absence of females and regretted that the evening's pleasand regretted that the evening's pleasure was not enhanced by the presence of the fairer sex. "Woman come after man," said Mr. Price, "and, since the creation, she has been after him ever since," During the evening Mr. Price interlarded the remarks of the different interlarded the remarks of the different speakers with happy and compliment-ary remarks. He called upon Emerson D. Owen, who responded to the toast, "Our City." The effort was serio-comic. The motto was "I have good cheer at home and I pray you all go with me." A monument in Chicago was compared to the bridge builders or was compared to the bridge builders on Linden street and the Lincoln park statue suffered in the comparison. In closing Mr. Owen recited "The Pio-neers of Scranton,"

John R. Edwards, the brilliant son of Judge H. M. Edwards, spoke on "Law." His text was: No thief ere felt the halter draw With good opinion of the law.

The speaker told his less profound hearers that Blackstone contains but two jokes and they are but fabrics of the side-splitting kind. Mr. Edwards told how often in his study he has turned from stacks of facts to those two, poor and meager jokes and he has laughed in the greatest glee. Mr. Edwards told humorous stories of the legal profession. He thought the law a gra fession of professions, and he made several present believe him.

At the conclusion of this toast the quartette sang. Then came "The Press," a toast responded to by Wallace G. Moser. The gentleman's remarks were serious and at times elemants the spake of the great mission. quent. He spoke of the great mission which the press covers. He told how Germany, where the first newspaper was founded, has grown great and grand through the efforts of the new paper. "The Press is." said Mr. Moser "a great agency for freedom. America can thank the press for its great in fluence and energetic spirit. England was never safe and powerful until the press was granted freedom, and even the Orient has felt its power." He maintained that a man's character should never be discussed in the columns of a newspaper. Only in a court of law should character be tried, and then the accused has an opportunity defending his name. The address held interested attention. MR. THAYER'S RESPONSE. The Vail brothers played, followed by the introduction of Edward W. Thayer, who spoke on "Politics." Mr. Thayer told some thing of his political career, which began and terminated in a vote of 113 to 13. Mr. Thayer received the unlucky number. Edward Vail recited Dr. Puffstuff's lecture. The title shows the humorous and Mr. Vail made the most of the funny part of it, and he was compelled to respond to an encore. He gave "The District School." Charles E. House spoke on the up-todate subject, "The New Woman." Mr. House stated that he would combine the serious with the comic. When woman began to place herself on an equa footing with man she was met with derision. Now she commands attention in all seriousness.

All respect which was due her through her estate has been lost she began to pose as a novelty in bloomers. Could we vent our feelings. bloomers. Could we vent our feelings, could we land to the skies such a woman? Could you give her that sacred name of "helpmeet?" Mr. House described the singleness of the first woman. "Did she then ride into the heart of man on bloomers," asked the speaker. The speaker ushered the banquetters, in imagination, to a meeting of the Limekiln cibb and closed with the Limekiln club and closed with a thoughtful peroration.

"Our Visitors," was ably responded to by Attorney Michael J. McAndrew, a member and representative of St. Brenden council. Mr. McAndew's re-Brenden council. Mr. McAndew's re-marks were brief. He returned his individual thanks to the society for its invitation, and as a member of a sister society he commended the spirit which prompted the courtesy.

"Patriotism" was the subject allotted to David J. Davis. His talk was much lauded. The banquet closed at 1.30

A RUN ON THE BANK.

Fine Performance Given by Ward and Vokes at the Frothingham. Ward & Vokes have few superiors in the country as farce comedy artists, a fact amply demonstrated by the very entertaining performance they gave at the Frothingham last night, with the assistance of a company that is almost up to the standard of the principles.
