Resolution Adopted by Robert Morris Lodge of Ivorites Thanking Those Who Assisted at the Eisteddfod.

Robert Morris lodge of Ivorites last aight celebrated their victory in the eisteddfod enterprise at the Frethingham on March 17. The eisteddfod committee reported that $401 had been cleared at the big affair. This is unprecedented in the history of local eisteddfods. A resolution was introduced by C. E. Daniels and carried by an unanimous vote of the lodge. It is as follows:

unanimous vote of the lodge. It is as follows:

"The eisteddfod committee of the Robert Morris lodge, No. 58, Order of American True Ivorites, wishes to express its appreciation of the hearty coperation given them in arranging the eisteddfod held on March 17, 1896. A big task faced the committee when they set out on their work, but the assistance so heartily given enabled the committee to make the event one of the most successful ever held in northeastern Pennsylvania. The committee desires to extend their thanks especially to the following: Colonel E. H. Rippie, Wade H. Finn. Joseph D. Lloyd, Dr. J. J. Roberts, the Scranton Truth, The Scranton Republican and The Scranton Tribune, who so generously donated prizes for competitions; to Hon, John T. Williams, Hon, John H. Fellows and Sheriff F. H. FROM OVER THE SEA.

Hungarians had a great big fight last evening on West Lackawanna avenue in a saloon kept by Joseph Polusky. The trouble arose over love. In the old country a man, Yuske by name, married a black-eyed damsel of his own na-tionality. Soon after marriage the woman deserted and came to this country. Yuske resolved upon dire revenge. He traced the woman to this city where she resides or exists with a fellow countryman. The Hungarian "Ostler Joe" was quite mad when he saw the couple last night in the saloon. He couple last night in the saloon. He wanted to fight; he got it and the heavy end at that. The police arrived and the fight stopped. Yuske went away but soon returned and in his hand a large rock menaced the safety of the police. He was locked up. A hearing will be given this morning. Drunkenness, of course, played its share in the broil.

COMING ENTERTAINMENTS.

The entertainment and social this evening at Sumner avenue church promises to be a successful affair. An excellent programme will be rendered by good talent. The competitions also is likely to be quite spirited. Miss Jemima Jones will adjudicate on recita-tions, Rev. J. Griffith chairman, Mrs. John L. James organist. Exercises to commence at eight o'clock sharp. The admission is ten cents. Judge Green, a humorist, will entertain at the Plymouth Congregational church on the evening of April 14.

LIVES SAVED BY JOKES.

How Two Kentucky Duelists Adjusted Their Little Difficulty .

George Davis and Bill Jacobs were small farmers in Bourbon county, Ken-tucky. They were not of "blue blood," but were dangerous fighters, says the Chicago Times. They had been friends, but "fell out" at last, and it was supposed they would "shoot on sight" next time they met. Their meeting was in the streets of Paris, the county seat. Davis drew a big navy revolver and Jacobs a little pocket derringer. When Davis saw the other man's weapon he muttered: "Oh, pshaw!" and returned his revolver to his belt and picked up a brickbat. Jacobs made no attempt to shoot, and the fight was deferred to a more auspicious occasion. This reminds me of an incident that happened in Denver during the wild and woolly days. A young man from away down east has gone to Denver armed with an old-fashioned Allen revolver—"pepper box" that weapon was called in those days. In a gambling house one night he be-came involved with a "bad man" in a quarrel and drew forth his pepper-box. The bad man, who was really a tough citizen from the mountains, and who had not he remotest idea of fear, and who was always armed with a pair of big navies, threw up his hands in well-feigned dismay and said: "Heavens, man! You ain't a-goin' to He is a monument of that border man's sense of humor.

THE OCCUPATION OF THE SOUDAN.

Editor of The Tribune.

Sir: England in Egypt, and her advance in that country, occasion many disquieting rumors which threaten the peace of Europe. The world must move, and as an onlooker we believe the present movement must prove an effective agent in the world's advancement. However combatable the case may be to those jealous of England, it cannot be denied that she asserts her influence in the direction of civilization and to the amelioration of those unfortunate ones who are in ignorance of the blessings shared by the people of the western hemisphere. England takes a bold stand, and a position of which she is thoroughly conversant, despite the conflicting reports to the contrary. Diplomacy has been consulted! Jealousy is rampant among the rival powers of Europe.

England's operations in the Nile country are unquestionably to put down the Jealousy is rampant among the rival powers of Europe.

England's operations in the Nile country are unquestionably to put down the destructive forces operating against civilization. forces that are as the deadiy night shade to progress, and diametrically opposed to the inevitable drift of events peculiar to this day and century. Setting aside the inuendos and narrow interpretations which are too often impugned to England by the rival powers of Europe, we ask in its place, a studious and an impartial investigation. We believe the day approaches, and that, a day long sought after by all civilization in concert, when there will be more light in dark places. This nation has of late been moved to sympathy from center to circumference in behalf of Armenia. Such a call will be ever present until England or some other favored nation takes the initiative in the cause of civilization and its companion, Christianity. The call is an imperative one, and of its truth the powers of Europe are slowly, but surely giving unanimity of thought and consent.

Though complicated and fraught with many dangers, the English advance in Egypt means a conquest for the development of the eastern countries to Christianity, a work forcing itself to the front by harmonious evolution. It is reserved for England by virtue of her intelligence and Christianity to illumine that oasis of darkness, and her advance, expansion and supremacy must be attended with far-reaching effect to the exclusion of neither creed nor color. Humanity of the three continents must soonor or later feel the beneficent effects. Though late the attempt, it is not to England's discredit, but to those inimical to her expansion, and their fear of the fierce light of Christianity that follow in the train of her advance. The state of affairs in the east is visibly presented in the presence of America's Red Cross society with its noble representation, Miss Clara Barton, and her associates in humanity. In the Red Cross society's mission of mercy, civilization bids it God-speed.

HE WAS REBUFFED.

I was going down to Staten Island the other Saturday afternoon on a crowded ferryboat and it happened that I got a seat next to a man about 60 years old who soon let me know that his was in Central New York. W talked for a bit when he said to me:
"Stranger I rather like your looks and I want to sorter unbosom myself to

I told him that I would preserve and respect his confidence and he continued: "My wife died about seven y'ars ago." "Yes, I took you for a widower."
"When she died I thought I'd never git married agin, but I've kinder changed my mind about it. If I could find jest the right sort o' woman I thing I'd enter the chains of matrimony believe they call it the chains, don't they?"

"Yes, it is sometimes referred to in that way. Can't you find the right sort of woman up your way?"
"No, can't find her. Thar's some I'd wants me that I wouldn't marry no-how. It's purty hard to git jest the sort o' woman you want. I've bin tryin' fur three years and haven't found her yit."

"Did you think you might pick one up down here?" I asked. "Say! that's what brung me down here!" he whispered in reply. Its jest struck me that I'd hev me pick of thousands here in New York. Fact is, I fol-lowed a woman onto the boat who jest fills my eye. That's her a-sitten' over thar by the fat woman."

The woman he pointed out seemed to me to be an old maid and a kicker, and so far as looks went she was the home liest woman on the boat. I was sur prised at the old man's choice, but said nothing to that effect.

"Yes, she's my idea of what a second wife orter to be," he said, as he rubbed his hands together, "but how am I goin' to speak to hee?"

to speak to her?" "There's a vacant stool beside her. Go over and sit down and take occasion to say you are a stranger and ask her to give you information about this or that. She may be very pleasant or she may re

"I think I'll do it," he said, as he go up and felt to see if his necktie was all right. I moved away at the time and didn't see him again for ten minutes Then I ran across him in the cabin tucked away in the corner and looking very pale-faced and perturbed. "Well, how come out?" I queried.

"Say! What did you say she might do to me?" he asked.
"I said she might rebuff you. Did

"Stranger, I'm not quite sartin of it, but I think she did-I think she did!" he solemnly relied. "I sot down beside her and said I was a stranger, and asked her how high the Statter of Liberty was, and she swiped me over the head with her parasol and got some fellers to slam me around and run me in here. Yes, I kinder think she rebuffed me, and she kin go to grass and be hanged to her!"

A THWARTED CRIME.

Curious Tale, the Scene of Which I Laid in India. From the London Globe.

An Indian up-country paper tells a curious tale. A rich lady, with her two children, both infants, was going, it is said, in her own "ekka" from Ramnagar to a place in the center of the Bar tract. The driver was a trustworthy servant of the family, and it was for this reason that the lady had not divested herself of the ornaments she usually wore. But the sight of the jewels was too much for him, and at an exceptionally lonely spot in that lonely country he suddenly asked his mistress to hand him her valuables. On her suspecting the real design and hesitating, the misoreant showed himself in his real colors, and made her and har little ones, who could barely toddle about, get down. The horrible thought that was working in following this advice. to a place in the center of the Bar trace his brain, that of hiding his crime by means of murder, had given his face a sardonic look, which made the poor wo-man tremble.

sardonic look, which made the poor woman tremble.

Then the flend bound her, hand and foot, and informed her that he would first kill her children and then do her to death. By her earnest entreties she prevailed over him to begin with her first. He had an ax in his hand, with which he aimed a blow at her, but the bead being loose, it flew away and fell a few paces off, the handle only remaining in his grasp. He stepped into the grass to look for it and disappeared behind a mound. She waited her certain doom with all her nerves on the strain.
She gradually fell into a swoon, and when she came around the first thing she saw was her husband bending over her and her babies crying and tugging
at her clothes.

After she had left a nameless uneasiness seized her husband. He could not reason away his vague fears, try as he would, and at last he mounted his horse and followed the "ckka.". He had proceeded but a few miles when the dreadful sight of his wife and children lying bound up with cords on the ground met his eyes. And the story that his wife told him congealed his blood with horror. They both then, drawn by an irrepressible curiosity, went toward the direction that, the miscreant had taken to pick up his ax, and think of their surprise when they saw his corpse already lying blue, putrid, and bloated,
