TALES OF MUD. Both the Columbia and Franklin Both the Columbia and Franklin companies wagons became stuck in the mud while on the way to yesterday morning's fire and if the fire had been a large one the flames would have had their own freedom. On Robinson street a rock, size 2x2, is imbedded in the mud in the center of the street. It fell from a stone carrier's wagon and no one seems disposed to lift it from the road. The danger is great.

On South Main avenue at the corner of Luzerne street, workmen several weeks ago planted an empty barrel and two sticks in the mud. It was done as a means of warning drivers of a "sink hole" in the road. The frost came on and now it is impossible to move the obstacles. A wagon became imbedded in the mud on Robinson street Tuesday evening. Street car traffic was delayed for a half hour.

PARTIES LAST EVENING Lewis Davis, the ambitious young choir leader of the Jackson Street Bap-tist church choir, was surprised last evening by a visit from the choir mem-bers. His home on Bellevue Heights was filled with much merriment for several hours. several hours.

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

A crowded house will doubtless greet Edward E. Rice's resplendent extrava-gana, "1492," at the Academy of Music gana, "1492," at the Academy of Music next Friday evening. To dwell upon the merits of this grand production is unnecessary, as they are too well known to all admirers of theatrical delectation from the Atlantic to the actific. No organization in the history of the American stage has even been attended with such glowing success from its initial performance. Nothing has been left undone to strengthen and improve upon the former presentation in this city, and many additions and revisions have been made to accomplish this result. As it will be seen tomorrow evening, it might well be called a new "1492." The cast is an admirable one in every respect, including forenew "1492." The cast is an admirable one in every respect, including foremost among its members Mark Smith, Miss Carrie Behr, Miss Flora Finlayson, Raymond Stephens, Miss Marie Hilton, John Keefe, Gilbert Gregory and others of repute. Tom Browne, the whistler, and Zehna Rawiston, the American Vesta Lillie, are among the specialty features. specialty features.

The long looked for and much talked about Bostonians are to appear at the Academy of Music Saturday night. That a large and fashionable audience will be in attendance at the presentation of that brilliant and tuneful operagoes without saying. The Bostonians goes without saying. The Bostonians are noted for keeping faith with the public, and their productions are given a completeness rarely attained by other similar organizations. There is no blatant announcement of chorus of fifty and orchestra of 100, but the public is vouchsafed these most important accessories in the same detail as charac-terized the production in New York. Sale of seats has already opened with a rush that indicates an eagerness on the part of the public to make this engagement the most noteworthy of the Margaret Mather, who has long been known as one of the most thrilling and artistic actresses on the stage, in any play would be an object of no small attention, but whenshe comes, as she does this year, in Shakespeare's masterpiece of love and death, our theater-goers may certainly expect a rare treat. This magnetic and beautiful young woman brings to and beautiful young woman brings to the part of Juliet a warm, highly-developed temperament well suited to the portrayal of the role. The play is set with magnificent new scenery carried by the company.

One of the most notable engagements made by Manager Davis this season is that of the London Galety Girls, who open a three-days' stay at that popular theater commencing this afternoon.
