One of the most beautiful ancient British modes of teaching divine lessons which has come down to us is the custom of decorating graves with flowers on the first day of spring. I say first day of spring, for that is the time of the year indicated, but by following the moon's movements, instead of the so-called movements of the sun, the time of observing the floral rite of fl ering the graves is constantly shifted as to the date. The moon time comes to us from the Jews. Their year was, and is still regulated by the moon, and the "new moon" was the time in March and September (O. S.) or Nisan and Tishri, when they commenced their sacred and civil years. At the commencement of the sacred one they killed the Passover ram, and at the beginning of the civil year they killed the billygoat. But the custom of flowering graves is a broad sunlight custom, and has nothing sanguinary about it. It has more of the greatly-libeled Cain about it than of Abel. The last named by his practices resembled Typhon, the Egyptian Pluto, far more than the former, and Plutonic people still hate the floral lessons of Cain, and throw every impediment in the way of its disciples in practicing it. The plea of the obstructionists is that the people are ani-mated by a competitive spirit in decorating graves with flowers on Flowering funday. Would there were more com-petition in doing good, and in the practice of beautiful ancient customs! Others object to it as popish. This objection is monstrous. What would we have had today were it not for the Roman Catholic church? Let us revere her for her past mighty services to mankind, and heartily forgive her the mistakes of her fallible priests. But it is not a pop ish custom. It is a pure Druidic or Bardic, survival of a grand period when all British people studied the things that were made and seen with a view to understand the unseen things of the Highest. The ancients had no books, but they had the pages of the seasons which were unfolded before their eyes by an Unseen Hand. Those pages were untarnished by the hand of bigotry, prejudice, impudence and ignorance. Each page seemed to say, "The Hand that made us is divine," What a beautiful page is that of spring. It is dec-tiful page is that of spring. It is decorated with snowdrops, lilles, myriads of dalsies and daffodis, "that come before the swallows dare." Each beautiful sprout, bud and flower of spring smiled the charming smile of hope in the haunts of men. Mrs. Hemans heard the sweet song of spring, and her

A chair of journalism has been erected and endowed in the Roman Catholic Uni-versity of Lilie, France. Why, then, asks the Western Mail, should not a chair of journalism be founded in one of the Welsh university colleges, with Morien as its first professor?

equally characterized by features of beauty and of grandeur. Its majestic groves of oak and fir, alternating with fruitful corn-field and luxuriant meadows, etc." A commentator upon this says that if the writer were to re-visit this delightful spot —Sweet Berdar—he would tramp into the next valley to see if he had not made a mistake.

According to a London journal which seems to be making a special study of hazardous spires and unsafe cathedral windows, "the latest disquieting news of our national churches is that the tower of Wrexham church is in danger. It is a magnificent piece of architecture, and is known as one of the seven wonders of Wales—some say because it is the finest Gothic erection in Wales, if not in Great Britain. It was begun in the year 1505, and has an altitude of 136 feet. The structure is now being surveyed preparatory to a report being made as to its condition.

charming Welsh name for what the Eng-lish call "botany" by borrowing a Greek word—has been dealt with in a very lucid and interesting series of lessons, pub-lished in book form, by a young Cardi, Mr. George Reese, of Aberystwith. Mr. Reese's botanical researches have been followed with great interest by his friends in Car-digaushire and in North Wales, where he is well known.

When Tom Hughes, who recently died, came to Wales he felt himself a bard, and, on the principle of doing in Rome as the Romans do, he perpetrated rhyme. Staying some years ago at the Pen-y-gwydhotel, at the head of Llanberis Pass, which hostelry was then kept by a Mr. Henry Owen. An inspection of the visitors' book revealed that Charles Kingsley, Tom Taylor and Tom Hughes, when staying at the hotel on a certain occasion, had evidently experienced bad weather, for they amused themselves by writing bits of rhyme in the book on this and other matters, each contributing a verse in turn. Here is one from the pen of the author of "Tom Brown's School Days":

"I came to Pen-y-gwyyd

"I came to Pen-y-gwryd
A-larking with my betters:
A mad wag, and a mad poet—Both of 'em men of letters;
Which two ungrateful parties, After all the care I've took,
Made me to write verses lade me to write verses In Henry Owen's book!"

life in the earth in the spring time was profoundly interesting. It was life thrilling around the graves where lay their dead. It was life coming from the Author of all lives, and its possibilities delighted all to meditate over. The almighty skill manifested in the exquisite artistic forms and colors of flowers and leaves spoke to them that the artist Himself was close at hand, even among the graves of the dead, in many a mouldering heap. All the dead were buried with faces towards the east, be cause it was from there the Divine Spirit seemed to exercise his reviving power through the sun. And the New Testament seemed to hint that from the east point of the sky the last trumpet would be heard, summoning from their narrow beds the dead. It appears that ## antiquity, especially the inhabi-tants of Britain, believed that the resurrection of the dead would occur in the spring of the year, and that the glor-ious new bodies to clothe them therewith would come ready prepared like the flowers of spring. For thousands of years the Welsh-Britons have, as a religious duty, gone at Easter to the graves to remove the ruins of winter and plant them with fresh flowers; and it was formerly the custom at Easter to color the graves white, the old Weish hue of holineses. But the Puritanical leprosy came into Wales, and, assoclating religion and the hope of another life with melancholy, it nearly broke the heart of the liveliest nation in Europe. Laughing, which men and women can only do, was a sign of spiritual deteloration; whistling was a sign of being certainly in league with satan. Love of flowers was a sign of spiritual frivolity, but, instead of blacking grease on one's shoes on Sunday was an infallible sign of the holy unction of the heart. Danc-ing on the green and May games were certain indications that one was trott-ing rapidly down the "way" that is

"broad," but which ought to be "narrow."Having long been in the leprosy school, it is very slowly that the Welsh leaders of thought are becoming recon-ciled to the revival of the beautiful ancient customs of a highly poetical people, who were wont to see fairies in the glens, dancing in the moonlight

BUSINESS BREVITIES.

PENNSYLVANIA STEEL CO.—The annual report of the Pennsylvania Steel company shows that the concern has been thoroughly rehabilitated and is entering upon a new period of prosperity. The year 1835 was not a good one in the iron trade, yet it seems the company did very well. The gross profits at Steelton were 4425,883.12, and at Sparrow's Point $242,861.79, or a total of $695,950.91. The dividend of 5 percent declared by the Juragua Iron company is not included in this total, as it was not received by the time the year ended, but if included it would swell the total by $37,500. The interest payments were unusually large because swell the total by $37,500. The interest payments were unusually large because of the adjustment of the floating debt, and the reorganization expenses, legal and otherwise, were very considerable, so that the net profits were nearly all absorbed. With only four months of good business last year, the company earned about $700,000 profit. The annual fixed charges are $350,000, the preferred stock dividend calls for $105,000 more, so that it seems on even the dull, business of a year like 1895 a fair surplus is earned for the common stock. With business in a normal condition, the results would be much better.

RAILWAY BONDS.—According to Messrs. Clapp & Co.'s circular the sales of railroad bonds in the New York Stock exchange during the first quarter of this year were of the face value of $73,707,068. The average price was 68½ per cent. of the latter. Last year the bonds dealt in were of the face value of $55,670,633, and the average price was 73½ per cent. This makes the average price at the stock exchange this year $2.4 as compared with 73.5 last year.

COTTON GOODS PRICES.—Standard cotton goods prices at this time compared with the lowest prices are as follows:

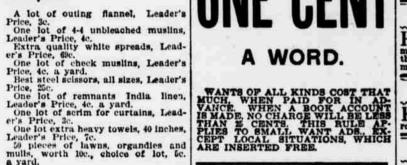

Low. High. Pres1895. 1895. ent.

BELGIUM'S COAL PRODUCT.-Bel gium's coal product last year was 20,-092,412 tons, of which nearly 25 per cent. was exported.

STAMPS.—The government sale of postage stamps during the quarter ending March 31, amount to $21,023,613, the largest in this quarter for any year. NEW SHIPS.—The lake shipyards
