Many Cases of Suffering Resulting from Desertion Come Before the Poor Board-An Old Darkey's Pathetic Appeal, for Aid.

Scranton trots out another noveltywas admitted yesterday by order of the poor board on motion of President Langstaff, who explained that the man who is aged and feeble has no relatives to care for him and is dependent upon a West Side beneficial society for subsistence. The society was willing to provide for him, but the old man provide for him, but the old man thought it was too much to expect and concluded to go to the poor house. The society was not willing that one of its members should be a common pauper and offered to pay for his keeping at the farm. This is the only instance known to any of the directors or officers, where a person's board and keeping has been paid for at a poor house. The price of board was fixed at $1.75 per week. Dear Mrs. Boles:
In Saturday's Scranton Tribune it is noted that the Young Women's Christian association propose issuing on May 14 a "Women's Newspaper" as a nucleus of a building fund. I will make herewith a subscription for 100 copies of the paper at $1 each ($100.) I make this early so the society, which I hope will have many subscriptions running into the thousands, can early decide how large an issue will be needed.

Yours very truly,
William H. Richmond.

Descrition was the cause of nearly all the poverty that had to be relieved at yesterday's meeting. There were two women who were descrited by their husbands, one mother who could not find the father of her three-months-old babe, and one child whose father ran away and left her after his wife died.

The little one was braucht before the The little one was brought before the board by her grand-parents, Mr. and

Mrs. Leonard Simerson, of Providence, Their daughter was the mother of the little girl, and when the mother died they took the little one under their care. The father whose name was Shear, was never any too good to the child, and when a few_months ago he child, and when a few_months ago he deserted her the grandparents were overjoyed for this gave them what they had long sought for, the full care and training of their little grand-daughter. Yesterday when the story was related to the board there was no hesitency on the part of the members in indenturing the child to the grand-parents. The old couple walked out of the meeting to the business men of Scranton. Some business men who at first bought small space in the paper are asking for additional space, realizing that the paper is going to be a great advertising medium. Many advance subscriptions for copies of the paper are being sent in, and already a large number of articles for the paper are in the hands of the editor. It is possible that to accommodate all the friends who wish to advertise and the contributors whose old couple walked out of the meeting room leading their little charge be-tween them and wearing happy smiles.

AMATEURS IN DRAMA.

Wood's College Pupils Give a Creditable Performance at the Frothingham. The presentation of "The Lost Mine" by the Williams Debatting and Literary society of Wood's college at the Frothingham last night was quite creditable for an amateur organization. The participants were neither stagey nor constrained, the extremes which generally characterize beginners, but instead were natural and reliant and consequently were seen at their best. There was no halting in the lines, and everything moved off smoothly, showing careful training and patient drill. The settings and costumes betrayed little or nothing of the amateur in them, and were quite as elaborate as the average drama attempts. The cast of charac-ters were as follows:

Miss Hawks put more life and feel-ing into her work than the others and as a result came in for the greatest share of the encomiums. Miss Beall and Miss Haggerty the other lady memand Miss Haggerty the other lady mem-bers of the cast, were easy and grace-ful in their parts and were liberally applauded. The natural grade of the street at that point is 24 per cent., or 24 feet in the hundred. An idea of the steepness of this hill can be better conjectured when it is stated that Lackawanna avenue hill, at its steepest stretch, is less than 12 per cent. By the city engineer's plans a grade of 15½ per cent., which will make the road passable, can be established. His idea is to construct a 16-foot serpentine roadway through the 60-foot street and devote the spare space to grass plots and shade trees.
