Vigorous Sermon Delivered by Rev. Hugh Davis on the Dancing Evil. He Denounces It Roundly.

Rev. Hugh Davis, pastor of the Welsh Calvinistic Methodist church on South Main avenue, preached another in-vective against the "dancing evil" at the evening service last night. The warm weather kept away many who were interested in the announcement of were interested in the announcement of the sermon. Nevertheless there was a large number of young people present. Mr. Davis' sermon was in the form of a well-drawn argument. He took his text from Exodus, xxii:28. After refer-ring to the worshiping of idols and the words of Moses in denouncement of the custom, the speaker came down to the present time and attempted to show that dancing was similar to idol obeispresent time and attempted to show that dancing was similar to idol obeisence, inasmuch as it places its votaries between God and the rightful worship of His name. Theatres, intemperance, and other forms of amusement came under Mr. Davis' law.

"America is full of idols," said the venerable speaker, "a few years ago things were not as they now are. Now the land is a race course to wealth and avarice," In mentioning dancing he used the following terms to denounce it: "licentious," "a school of iniquity," "it belongs to the devil," "It shows its pressure on weak physical frames and undermines the nervous system," "It is a fatal rock on which thousands are dashed every year." In closing he advised young people not to injure themselves. There is a distinct division between lawful and unlawful pleasure, said the speaker. "Dancing appeals to the lower passions of our nature; next to the saloon it destroys more domestic felicity than any other evil. As far as the statistics of our larger cities go the abandoned women are outputs from darice halls, Conscience is hardened by it in an attempt to harmonize the practice with Christian profession." The this an attempt to harmonize the prac-tice with Christian profession." The speaker closed by urging fathers and mothers to watch over their daughters.

The Square-Built Scribe Had Two Chance to Say "Weil, General," to Wolseley. From the Saturday Review.

"War correspondents!" exclaimed Lord Wolseley. "Some of them are desperately brave, while others are anything but heroes. The majority, I think, do their duty well, even when it leads them into tight places. By the way, talking of tight places and war correspondents, I remember an incident that may interest you. It was at the beginning of the Ashantee camat the beginning of the Ashantee cam-paign, just after our landing; a square-built little man came up to me and said, speaking slowly, and with an unmis-takable American accent:

"General, allow me to introduce my-self; I am the correspondent of the

New York Herald. I—"
"Too busy to attend to him, I cut him short with 'What can I do for you, sir?' "He replied, imperturbably, with the same exasperating slowness: 'Well, general, I want to be as near you as I can if there is any fightin' to be seen."
"Captain So-and-So has charge of all the arrangements concerning cor-respondents. I rejoined, curtly. 'You had better see him.' And with this I turned on my heel and went about my business.

"I saw no more of my correspondent with the aggravating coolness and slow-ness of speech for many a day. I did not even know whether he was accom-not even know whether he was accompanying the column or not.

"Personally speaking, I was only in danger once during the whole expedition. It was shortly before we entered Coomassie. I had pressed forward with the advance troops, hoping to break the last effort at resistance and have done with the orgal when the area. with the affair, when the enemy, utiliz-ing the heavy covert, came down and fairly surrounded us. For a few min-utes the position was critical, and every man had to fight, for the enemy's fire was poured in at close quarters. They pressed upon us from all sides, dodging from tree to tree, and continually edging closer, hoping to get hand to hand. In the hottest of it my attention was caught by a man in civilian's clothes, who was some lifteen or twenty varies. who was some lifteen or twenty yards in front of me, and who was completely surrounded by the advancing savages. He seemed to pay no heed to the danger he was in, but, kneeling on one knee, took aim and fired again and again, and I seemed to see that every time he and I seemed to see that every time he fired a black man fell. I was fascinated by his danger and coolness. As our main body came up and the savages were driven back, I went forward to see that no harm came to my civilian friend. To my astonishment it was the correspondent of the New York Herald, and he began in the same slow, calm way:

way: "'Well, general-'

"Again I interrupted him: 'You were lucky to escape. Didn't you see that you were surrounded?'
"'Well, general,' he began again, 'I guess I was too much occupied by the niggers in front to pay much attention to those behind.

"That was evidently the simple truth Whatever men may say in the future about Henry M. Stanley no one that has seen him in danger will deny that his courage is of the first quality.
