FIRES STILL RAGING.

The Rain Vesterday Not Heavy Enough to Onench Them.

The forest fires above the city are still raging flercely, the strong wind of the last few days faming them and scat-tering them in all directions. It was thought yesterday that there would be thought yesterday that there would use a heavy rain which would quench the flames, but the light showers we had only served to smealder them for awhile. It did some good, however, as it gave the men who are fighting the bleze an opportunity to get it somewhat under control, so that there will the long within a last been secured and the long within seems control as the form withing which seems control as the seems control as t
