BOARD OF TRADE BANQUET. A large number of representative West Side business and professional men assembled at the dining room of Fairchild's South Main avenue hotel last evening and celebrated the tenth anniversary of the West Side board of trade.

Those present were: T. Fellows, Mason, E. M. Clarke, Dr. P. F. Struppier, A. E. Holmes, H. M. Stroeter, W. H. Roe, Attorney Charles R. Fitcher, E. E. Morse, John J. Davis, W. R. Williams, ex-Postmaster D. M. Jones, ex-Councilman E. E. Rothman, William Blume, William Farrell, Councilman Joseph E. Oliver, D. D. Evans, Hon. John R. Farr, Dr. M. J. Williams, ex-City Assessor H. Phillips, George Bomore, Phillip Williams, Jenkin T. Reese, George F. Eynon.

At 9.30 o'clock the first course was served. The menu was an elaborate one and the pro-prandial part was very much enjoyed. After cigars the speech making began. Retiring President Mason was toastmaster.

Representative John R. Farr told of the inception of the board. Several of those present were among the first members. Mr. Farr stated that one of the first victories of the board was to open Robinson street. "I have heard people say," said Mr. Farr, "What has the board done?" True, we have not any large factories that have been attracted to this side by the board's effort, but we have instilled much enterprise and a spirit of progress. President-elect E. M. Clarke followed Mr. Farr. He said that he came in contact with thousands of residents of other parts of the city and the general opinion was that the approaches from the central city were bad. Mr. Clarke believes that the West Side is about to see a new era of prosperity. Real estate, especially, will receive an impetus. The speaker thought that a building and loan association would greatly assist in West Side progress. After Mr. Clarke, Postmaster Mason called upon City Engineer E. H. Phillips to tell about chief clerk hire. Mr. Phillips responded that "paves, not bridges, were now the order."
