A BURGLAR CAUGHT.

The Man is Finally Secured After a Series of Robberies.

For some time Santo Pughano, pro-prietor of the Columbus house on Dun prietor of the Columbus house on Dun-dant street, has missed sums of money that have been left in the cash regis-ter over night. The robbers left no clew and the locks of the doors were in good order so it was not known how any one gained entrance to the place. The burglars continued at irregular intervels and aithough Pugliano had his suspicions, he did not have enough extigence upon which to make an arevidence upon which to make an ar-rest. The person he knew was some one who was well acquainted with the place and so he set secretely to work to get some evidence. It was finally thought advisable that watchers should be placed in the room each night and for the last two weeks two men have passed the mights hidden in one of the booths. Here they could see the entire bar room without themsolves being seen.

nights passed on and the burglar did not come. Pugliano had began to think his Plan had leaked out and was a little discouraged. He determined to keep the watch a few nights longer and vesterday met his reward. The watchers, Salvatore Gegleottl and Peter Mussaro, were early yesterday morn-ing aroused by a creaking noise. They ing aroused by a creaking nelse, were on the alert in a moment and were rendy to give the intruder a warm re-ception. Suddenly the door opened and the figure of a man was seen to enter and make his way toward the registers and with a key obered the door. He had just blaced some money in his pocket when the men fired their revol-pocket when the men fired their revol-vers to alarm the burglar. The fright was too muchs for the robber and he fell on his knees asking for mercy. While one of the men kept guard over the prisoner the other went to arouse Mr. Pugliano. Then something happened that looks rather queer, for when Pugliano returned the lights were cont and the man left on guard was out and the man left on guard was pointing his revoices at the place he thought the robber was. He had made his escape through the centar, but was at once pursued. He was overtaken and brought back to the hotel, where he was placed in the hands of a police-

The burglar made his way into the house through the front cellar window. Some one from the inside must have unlocked this and Pugliano is endeavoring to get Cooper, the man who was caught, turn state's evidence.

Copper claimed he was innocent, saying he was on his way home when tak-en in charge by the policeman. Chief of Police McAndrew had no belief in the story and after a little hard work succeeded in getting some of the truth from him. He says he entered through from him. He says he entered through the cellar door, which was obened by the bartender, who invited him in. Cooper says Colette, the bartender, took the money. ### WILKES-BARRE.

THE GREAT BARNUM SHOW. Immense Crowds Witness Feature More Wonderful Than Ever. Those who looked out of their win-dows at the skies early yesterday morn-ing were somewhat dismayed at the signs which seemed to presage a stormy day. Barnum's great show had spread its acres of tents on Sunday, and as the grounds were visited by thousands, naturally the desire was universal that fair weather would prevail on Monday. As the hours wore on, it became evi-dent that rain would not spoil the parade, and as the sun was welcomed and the air decidedly cool, those who wit-nessed it could not be numbered. And nessed it could not be numbered. And it met every expectation as all of Barnum and Baileys promises do. Owing to the presence of low telephone, trolley and other wires on one or two of the principal streets, these thoroughfares were abandoned for others. But the gittering parade was viewed by multitudes who occupied seats in the many windows and who lined the sidewalks on the Public Square. In every reon the Public Square. In every re-spect he parade was a success. It was as entertaining an outdoor attraction as was ever revealed in this city and plainlyforetold the excellence of the great show under the mammoth tents.
