A Good Story Told by Make Tarpey About Popular Bishop Whitaker. From the San Francisco Post, One of the most popular men that ever lived in the state of Nevada was Bishop Whitaker, of the Episcopal church, who is now in Pennsylvania, and many stor-les are told at his expense. One of the best that I have heard is the incident that Make Tarpey, the politician, re-lates whenever the good bishop's name

'Although I'm a Catholic," said he, "and the bishop an Episcopalian, we al-ways thought a great deal of each nim from Pioche to Dry Valley to help him raise money with which to build a new Episcopal church in Pioche.

"One of the most peculiar characters in that neighborhood was a man was generally." There was nothing that I would in that neighborhood was a man who was generally known by the sobriquet of Billy-be Damn. He carned it by reason of the surprising eloquence of his profanity. He could outswear any man in Nevada and in those days it took better than a raw hand at cussing to do that. Billy was bald-headed and he was firmly convinced that the custom of imprisoning the hair in a hat was responsible for its loss. For that reason he usually wore a hat with the crown

THE FAMOUS CASE

Responding to a pariamentary in-quiry the other day, the British Home Secretary, for perhaps the thirtieth time, announced that the English government had formed no intention of reopening the case of Mrs. Maybrick, the American woman who is in a British rison charged with husband murder establishment while in the City.

The city of the men and women who are working in her behalf are actuated by that zeal and enthusiasm which, in olden times, made martyrs. An examination of the entire legal pro-ceedings in the trial of Mrs. Maybrick has recently been made at the request of Secretary Olney by General Garland, and it will be used as the basis of a We have placed on sale an unique Knights Templar Souvenir. paper says:

"Florence E. Chandler was born in 1882. 'She was the daughter of a prominent banker of Mobile, William G. Chandler, the first husband of her mother, the Baroness de Roques, who was a daughter of Darius Blake Hol-brook, a New York merchant, one of Cyrus W. Cyrus W. Field's partners in laying the first Atlantic cable. In 1881, she was married at Norfolk, Virginia, to James Maybrick, of Liverpool. Mr. Maybrick was at this time a man 44 years of age, made prematurely old by the reckless excesses of a fast life, and addicted to the habituel use of powerful stimulants and tonics. He was known by his Norfolk acquaintances to be an arsenic eater and took regularly a tonic.

Important details. We, therefore made free use of the newspapers and made four cullings. It is evident that the jury had not caught the meaning and force of the medical and expert testimony-juries seidom do—and the irresponsible judge, in his crazy partisanship, had pointed out to them what he so clearly saw himself, to wit: that it was 'impossible to find the prisoner guilty in the face of the medical evidence.' Public opinion was dead against Mrs. Maybrick until after the trial. The senic eater and took regularly a tonic medicine of which arsenic is a principal ingredient.

MOVED TO LIVERPOOL. "After several years' residence in Norfolk the Maybricks removed to Liverpool. On April 27, 1889, Mr. May-brick, who for a long time had been all-ing and taking unusually large quan-titles of his tonics and stimulants, went to a race meeting on horseback, was caught in a rainstorm, got wet through and stayed out very late, dining not wisely but too well with some friends. The next day he was, naturally, very ill. Mrs. Maybrick called in two wellknown physicians who, with the aid of professional nurses, attended him con-stantly until his death, which occurred stantly until his death, which occurred at 8.40 o'clock on the evening of May 11, 1889. Early in the morning of that day Mrs. Maybrick fell into a speechless swoon which lasted for forty eight hours, and from the effects of which she was prostrated until May 18. Immediately after his death two Ignorant maid servants, great admirers of Mr. Maybrick, and great enemies of Mrs. Maybrick, and great enemies of Mrs. Maybrick, expressed their valuable opinion that the 'misses had poisoned the master' to Edwin and Michael Maybrick, brothers of the dead man, who had always disliked their American sister-in-law. They instantly called in the police. Search was made and 'arsenlic enough to poison fifty men' was found, every grain of it, it should be noted, in apartments and receptacles that were exclusively Mr. Maybrick's. waiter who testified to the interview in On the strength of this 'evidence' Mrs. Maybrick was placed under arrest on Maybrick was placed under arrest on May 14. She was still semi-unconscious stances' has now been swept out of the and unable to leave her bed, but policeand unable to leave her bed, but policemen were posted at her bedroom door and she was not allowed to see any one alone. On May 18, no testimony having yet been taken by the coroner as to the cause of Mr. Maybrick's death, she was taken to jail. She was not allowed to be present at any stage of the inquest.

On Ive Mr. Hard and the coroner is almost a great disgrace to the coroner in the minds of the obstinate officials who refuse to release her. If congress can, by spealing out very plainly, do anything to ward righting this wrong, whose continuance is almost a great disgrace to the coroner and she was not allowed to release her. If congress can, by spealing out very plainly, do anything to ward righting this wrong, whose continuance is almost a great disgrace to be present at any stage of the inquest. On June 6 Mr. Davis, to whom the liver, stomach and intestines of the deceased had been submitted for examination, reported that no traces of arsenic had been found in the stomach or its contents, that one-fiftleth of a grain of ar-senic (the twentieth part of a fatal dose) had been found in the liver, and. in the intestines, traces not weignable, not enough to kill a humming bird.' On the strength of this Mrs. Maybrick was committed for trial on the charge of wilfully murdering a confirmed arsenic eater.

HER TRIAL.

"On June 13th she was brought before the committing magistrate and heard for the first time the testimony against her. Her trial began at Liverpool July 31, 1889, before Mr. Justice Stephen and 31, 1839, before Mr. Justice Stephen and a jury made up of three plumbers, a wood-turner, a provision dealer, a grocer, two farmers, an ironmonger, a baker, a painter and a milliner. The trial lasted eight days, six of which were consumed by the witnesses and counsel and two in the delivery of his charge by the judge, who betrayed a most extradordinary animus against the prisoner. It would be tedious and charge by the judge, who betrayed a most extradordinary animus against the prisoner. It would be tedious and of Colgate Theological college, Hamilthe prisoner. It would be tedfous and useless to fully rehearse the testimony here, but it may be said that, on the crucial point of the case, the medical testimony was absolutely convincing that James Maybrick did not die of arsenical poisoning. It may be noted, too, that not one grain of the arsenic found in Maybrick's apartments and belongings was in way connected with Mrs. Maybrick, there was not a scintilla of evidence that she had ever nurchased evidence that she had ever purchased it, ever had it in her possession or ever even knew of its presence in the house. the will be perceived that the prosecu-tion's case had completely broken down in a vital point and that a verdict of guilty in this case could not but be a verdict against evidence. So fully was this recognized that while the jury was out the prosecution admitted that it did out the prosecution admitted that it did not anticipate a conviction and Mr. Jus-tice Stephen, in a lucid interval, said to the clerk: 'It is impossible to find her guilty in the face of the medical evi-

"But the jury, after being out only half an hour, came in with a verdict of guilty that was a surprise to everybody and that was universally condemned as "It is essential to the proper under-standing of this case that the circum-stances that were influential in leading the jury to its most erroneous but still honest conclusion should be explained. First it should be said that while there was, of course, no direct evidence that Mrs. Maybrick had administered arsenic to her husband, there was, naturally and inevitably, evidence that she had opportunities. Further, while there was no college, and after passing his examination with high honors, received his diploma. Not improving in health at proof that she purchased the arsenic found in the house, there was no proof that where it was found, which is the same thing as saying that there was no proof that fire the road. As usual, he had no crown on his hat and the July sun was beating down on his shiny pate in a way that threatened sunstroke at least.

"My good mam," said the bishop, "don't you know that this hot sun beating down on your unprotected head will bake your brain?"

"You big fool, do you suppose if I had any brains I'd be turning this wind-lass?"

had opportunities. Further, while there was no proof that she purchased the arsenic found in the house, there was no proof that Mrs. Same thing as saying that there was no proof that Mrs. Maybrick had purchased and had in her possession other arsenic. Here was proved to have bought a quantity of fly paper containing arsenic. Here was disfiguring eruption on her face before the date of a ball she wished to attend and procured a modical prescription for the preparahad opportunities for so doing so, be-

Tion of a cosmetic wash. One of the processes in the preparation of this cosmetic, as set out in the prescription, was the soaking of ity paper of the kind purchased by her, in water. She said she had bought the fly paper for this purpose and used it only as the prescription directed. She testified that she had lost the prescription and she was unable to produce as a witness the chemist from whom she had procured the fly papers and other ingredients for her cosmetic. There was evidence pointing to a motive for the alleged crime in the evidence of a waiter who testified to an improper meeting between Mrs. Maybrick and one Brierly, who, according to the theory of the prosecution, was her lover, in a London hotel. These were all exceedingly suspicious circumstances. Every one of them has been entirely cleared up, since the trial, but that does not affect the present consideration of their effect on the minds of the jurymen, which must have been great.

"Another and very strong influence 'n

the minds of the jurymen, which must have been great.

"Another and very strong influence 'n misleading the jury was the extraordinary charge of Mr. Justice Stephen. The present lord chief justice of England, who heard the charge, thus describes Justice Stephen's conduct: 'He passionately invited the jury to find a verdict of guilty, taking two days to sum up, the first day as judge and on the second rarged like a violent counsel. sum up, the first day as judge and on the second raged like a violent counsel for the prosecution against her.' So pasionately and brutally unfair a charge had not been delivered by an English judge since Jeffreys. Justice Stephen's conduct on this occasion was so extraordinary a departure from all judicial custom and from his own ac-customed manner that it was widely commented upon and regarded as incommented upon and regarded as in-explicable until, when Mr. Justice Ste-phen went mad shortly after this trial, it became plain that his extraordinay charge in the Maybrick case was mere-ly an outbreak of incipient insanity. This crazy exhortation to find the pris-oner guilty of course had a great effect

ONE JUROR'S CONFESSION. "How this monstrous verdict was reached is still further explained by the following statement of one of the jury-men: 'We could not hear the evidence very distinctly and, even if we could have done so, it was impossible to car-ry away with us in our memeories the important details. We, therefore made Mrs. Maybrick until after the trial. The Mrs. Maybrick until after the trial. The newspapers had unanimously condemned her and were full of false and sensational stories about the case and prejudiced comments upon it. The jurors were allowed to read the newspapers as much as they chose, and on the statements of the newspapers they found their verdict. Thus the verdict is explained, and now no one can advance the argument 'Oh, it isn't likely the jury would have found her guilty unless the argument 'Oh, it isn't likely the jury would have found her guilty unless there was something against her.

"There was nothing against her. Even with the suspicolus circumstances already referred to unexplained, Justice Stephen, in his right mind, must have seen that the testimony made his duty to so charge that his remarks to the jury would have practically amounted to a direction to go out and stone hack with a verdict of not guilty.

d, in apartments and receptacles brick, have been found, and that the us as to England, let congress do that thing, even if international courtesy be very severly strained. It may be re-marked that England has shown us no courtesy at all in this matter."
