WEST SIDE EVENTS.

Two Women and a Man Fall Down a Thirty-foot Embankment-All Hyde Park Saw the Parade.

An accident of the climbing-highmountain kind deserves mention chiefly for its novelty in these parts. Two women and a male escort were on their women and a male escort were on their way to the yesterday afternoon circus. They cut cross fields in an attempt to lessen the distance to the grounds and one of the ways traversed was through the space of land in the rear of the Powderly home and other houses on North Main avenue. They sauntered along the edge of the 30-foot embankment on the westerly side of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western rall-roud. One woman slipped her foot, she grabbed the other woman who, in turn grabbed the other woman who, in turn collared the man. Then the trio began a downward tumble. They rolled in all shapes and the journey was not ended until the level ground interfered with an unspeakable bang. Luckily there

GONE, BUT NOT FOREVER. A boy named Peters whose home is on North Main avenue, had an experience yesterday at the circus. He rides a bleycle and indiscreetly wheeled the ma-chine to the show grounds. Letting the bike rest on the edge of the main tent blke rest on the edge of the main tent he turned his back for a few minutes. Upon return he Yound a vacant space where the wheel had stood. The thief was afterward intercepted by friends of Peters, After threats he gave up the stolen machine.

ALL SAW THE PARADE.

The attractions at the central city well nigh depopulated Hyde Park yes-terday. Nearly every place of business was closed in the morning. The bar-bers were idle all day, storekeepers excused the clerks during the time of the parades, and the sizz of soda fountains were as silent as the business itself. A few dwelling houses were deco-rated in respect to the city's honored visitors. Up to 8 o'clock not a single arrest was made by the police authori-

NEWS NOTES AND PERSONALS. In the pave on South Main avenue, where Washburn street crosses, there where Washburn street crosses, there is a two-foot hole, where the asphalt has dropped. The place is dangerous especially to bicyclists. It is at the bottom of a natural hill, and riders are, naturally, inclined to speed. One young man was thrown last evening. The authorities should repair the spot.

THE FLYING DUTCHMAN.

The Mirage Probably the Origin of the Well-Known Sea Story.

From the St. Louis Republic. Th atmosphere in the vicinity of the Cape of Good Hope has that peculiar power of unequal refraction which produces the spectral mirages so well known to the early settlers on the great plains and to all trav lers and explor-ers in desert regions. This unequal blending of the rays of the rays of the light gives rise to what are known as "spectral loomings," by which is meant the apparent suspension of ships and other objects in midair. The peculiar properties of the atmosphere over that portion of the ocean mentioned have been known since men first "rounded the cape" in their voyages from western appearance of the mirage at that point is responsible for the legend of the "Death Ship," otherwise known as the Flying Dutchman." According to the story, a Dutch cap-tain, homeward bound from the East Indies, met with long-continued bad weather while trying to "round the cape." This series of squalls aws coupled with other circumstances which made "turning the cape" next to im-possible. The wind was "dead ahead" and the weather was dark and foggy. At the time when the brave little Dutch captain was making a final effort to get off in a northwesterly direction, and was about to make a failure of it, the mate and the sailors advised aim to turn back and seek shelter in a neighboring harbor until the gale was over. But this he refused to do, swear-ing that he intended to "turn the cape" if he had to beat back and forth along that shore until the day of judgment far this burst of profanity, so the tra-dition says, he was doomed to steer against the blustery winds forever. The sails of his ship, so those who believe in the legend say, have become bleached with age, and its sides and bottom worm-eaten and decayed in the long struggle which has ever since been kept up between the cursed vessel and the elemnts. The little Dutch captain and his crew, like all persons living under a spell, continue to exist, knowing their condition, but unable to help themselves. Ship captains who have sighted the doomed vessel time and again during the past century and half report that the crew of the cursed Dutch vessel appear to be living skeletons. Yet they continue to live under the blighting effects of what was brought on by their master's rashness. They cannot lower a boat they are so weak. Yet they occasionally hail pass-weak. It they occasionally half pass-ing vessels, imploring to be rescued from their awful fate. Such is the story of the "Flying Dutchman," which, no doubt, originated through ignorant, superstitious sailors viewng the mirage in awe-

SHORT STORIES.

Lord Dufferin once addressed the University of Toronto in Greek and on the following day the Canadian jour-nals announced that his command of the language was astounding, idiomatic and grammatically perfect. "How did those idiots of reporters know that?" asked Sir Hector Longevin of Sir John MacDonald.

"Because I told them," replied Sir

"But who told you? You don't know Greek," persisted Sir Hector. "I don't know Greek," admittel the premier, with his usual gravity, "but I

It was late in the evening and the have known enough about the human system and the functions of society to go home, but he didn't or if he did he was not putting his knowledge to much use. The girl in the meantime was doing the best she could under the circum-"You see, Miss Frances," he was saying as the clock struck eleven, "if from any cause the brain is unduly stimulated, whether by emotion, thought or external impressions on the one hand or by the acceleration of the blood current and increased blood supply through the cerebral versels, then the supervention of sleep will be delayed and possibly prevented for a prolonged period."

"Yes," she responded with feeling.

"but, you see, mine isn't that way."

The cases where height and breadth are not of advantage to their possessor are rare but they do exist, as, for example was shown the other day in law case where a workman sued his em-ployer for damage for what may well be called false imprisonment. He was engaged in alterations in a house, the front door of which was locked before his day's work was done and the means of exit confined to a wicket gate which did not admit his noble proportions. The position was absurd but no doubt very convenient. How long his incarceration lasted or whether ne was fed through the wicket gate as from a but-ter hatch does not appear, but he got no redress. Doors, it seems, were not con-structed for obesity but only for per-sons of moderate girth and stature. This reminds one of Sydney Smith's test of the possession of humor, a story wherein he who sees no fun, he says, has no sense of it. Some foolish persons after making a number of dull observations inquired of his companion why the posts had recently been placed nearer together. "Well." replied the other. "it was high time; you have no idea what fat people used to get into that park.

HE GAVE THEM A PUZZLE.

A Considerate Drummer Finds Some thing Interesting to Think About.

W. A. Robertson in Texas Siftings.
The drummer had spent a few hours very pleasantly with the members of the Doolittle Club. He rose to go, and after shaking hands affectionately with the various members and expressing his warm attachment to the club and promising faithfully to return again in the course of a couple of weeks, "By the way," said he, "if any of you wish to remember me specially during my absence, I have a rather peculiar little puzzle here—a simple little thing of my own make—which you might find interesting in your leisure moments," and he gave them the peculiar little puzzle of his own make and left them cheerfully.

The club immediately concentrated itself upon the puzzle. It finished the day at the puzzle, remarking as it did so that "that was a good puzzle, all right," but nevertheless, confident of success. The following day was similarly employed, and with similar results. Another day and another came and was gone; a week rolled away and, though the members of the club were incessant in their labors upon the puzzle, it was still unsolved. Another zle, it was still unsolved. Another week began. Some of the members had now become so interested and determined that they scarcely left for meals; but the puzzle still held out. The week drew towards a close. Some of the club had not slept for three nights. The drummer returned. They were The drummer returned. They were still hard at work upon the puzzle.
"Very interesting puzzle, isn't it?" he remarked, as he looked over their "Interesting! I wish I had never seen the dog-gasted thing," exclaimed one, "I can't leave it."

"I very nearly had it last Thursday," exclaimed another.

"Say, colonel," said another, "did you really make this puzzle yourself?"

"I did," was the reply.

"Well," said the same man, "I don't think the thing really can be done, any-

"No, I don't."
"Well, that's just what I think about it, too," coolly remarked the drummer, as he ambled toward the door in haste.

MARKETS AND STOCKS

Wall Street Review.

Wail Street Review.

New York, May 28.—It was another duit and uninteresting day at the Stock Exchange. Transactions were only 102,175 shares and of this Sugar, which was the most active stock, figured for 31,700 shares; St. Paul for 11,200; Manhattan for 6,000, and Burlington and Quincy for 5,500. At the outset the market was inclined to weakness, and prices receded about 16,2% percent., lower prices from London having led to moderate sales for the short account by local traders, who, for the moment, were arrayed on the bear side. The arguments advanced by those working for a decline were the continued decline in the prices of wheat, lard, pork and other products; the likelihood of further engagements of gold for export to Europe on Thursday and Saturday and the efforts making in the senate to change the matter of bond issues now in control of the treasury department. The low prices prevailing for products was much discussed in stock circles and houses with Chicago connections, comparatively speaking, were fairly large sellers of the Grangers for this season. It is to be said, however, that the actual owners of securities are not disturbed on account of the liquidations in wheat, corn and provisions and the low record prices made, and held on to their securities, notwithstanding the efforts of the shorts to dislodge long stock. Sugar, which was the leader in point of activity, first declined to 121%, and then rose to and closed at 123%, a net gain of 14% percent, for the day. The recovery was due to purchases by Washington firms who were liberal sellers a little while ago in the neighborhood of 125. Manhattan, a favorite of the traders in the board, opened slightly higher, then dropped to 102%, and later recovered to 103%. Leather, Preferred, sold off slightly on the announcement that action on the dividend had been postponed on account of the absence of several members of the executive committee. Speculation closed firm in tone under the leadership of Sugar, which ruled at the best figures of the day in the f
