DEATH OF JOHN J. CUSICK.

Oldest Son of the Late Owen Cusick

Passed Away Saturday. Another affliction has come upon the household of the late Owen Cusick, in the death of John J., the 17-year-old son, who passed away Saturday morning at 3 o'clock, after a short illness. The deceased graduated from St. Michael's College, Toronto, Can., last June and came home to take the business of his lamented father. A few months ago he was compelled to re-linquish business cares on account of Talling health and recently went to Lake Ariel in the hope that he would be benefitted by the invigorating air and country life. He showed some signs of improvement and his physician and triends were confident of his ultimate terms for the state of the recovery, until last Friday, when he dress goods, etc. 427 Lackawanns ave took a sudden change for the worse and nue. The very best for little money. In a few short hours passed away. His early and unexpected death is a sad blow to his family and friends and large circle of acquaintances. The funeral will take place tomor-row morning from the family home, 428 Lackawanna avenue. A requiem mass will be celebrated at St. Peter's cathedral and interment will be in Hyde Park Catholic cemetery.

INSPECTOR GARY HERE.

Figured So Prominently in the Holmes Murder Case. At the Hotel Jermyn is the man who was behind the scenes in the famous Holmes murder case and who was as instrumental in amassing the evidence against the multi-murderer as was De-tective Geyer. He is W. E. Gary, in-spector and adjustor for the Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance company of Philadelphia. Mr. Gary is here on general business for the company.

It was after the Fidelity company had paid the $10,000 policy on Peitzel's death that Inspector Gary advanced the theory of murder. Peltzel had then been dead thirteen days and buried two days. The inspector was not in Philadelphia at the time the body was found, nor did he begin work on the case until about two weeks later. After analyzing the few clues that were presented he traced the route of Holmes' flight and ascertained much of his past record. He then engaged Detective Geyer on the case and the two worked together.

Mr. Gary says that twenty-two mur ders are known to have been committed by Holmes, who resorted to killing in order to get rid of the women and men whom he had made his tools. He killed them to save himself from the law and not for the sake of insurance money, as is generally supposed. This is true in Peitzel's case, he said. Peitzel was Holmes' partner in crime and was beginning to weaken, so the latter put his confederate out of the way and made a play for the insurance money as a secondary object.

Concerning Holmes' newspaper confession that he had killed twenty-seven persons, Mr. Gary said that five of the twenty-seven had been found alive; the others were undoubtedly murdered. The five fictitious cases, said Mr. Gary, were created by Holmes in the hope that the truth would be discovered concerning them and then it would not be believed that he had killed the other twenty-two. Mr. Gary has with him copies of a number of interesting documents connected with the case and photographs of many of the principals.

VERY ENJOYABLE EVENT.

Excursion of the Teachers and Scholars to Lake Ariel.

The first excursion of the teachers and pupils of the public schools of ever held was run to Lake Ariel Saturday, and in point of pleasure lt was successful beyond all expectation of the promoters. Fourteen cars, containing about 1.500 people, bore the ex-cursionists to the lake. Later trains brought several hundred more to the scene of outing. At the lake a fine programme of festivities was carried out under the direction of the several sub-committees.

The morning was delightful in point f weather although a high wind made boating difficult. A base ball game was played between clubs from No. 14 preparatory school, of the West Side, and the school boys of the North End and Green Ridge. No. 14 won by a score of 14 to 4. The West Side boys gave a clever exhibition of playing. Harrington, pitcher, was the hero of the hour. He allowed but one hit. M. J. Ketrick was umpire. Miss Mary McHale, of No. 3 school, won the ladies boat race. The prize was a guitar.

In the gentlemen's boat race Professor David Owens, of No. 14 school, won the prize, two volumes of "Gettysburg Illustrated." In the bloycle pump test a pupil from Miss Mackey's preparatory room was successful. Superintendent of Schools George L. Howell was ably assisted in conducting the excursion by the following teachers: Burdick, Hawker, L. Lange, Beaumont, Ketrick, H. I. Morgan, McCawley, Hughes, Owens and D. A. Stone. The affair was for the good of the Teachers' Beneficial association.

Wilbur company closed a successful week of opera at the Frothingham Saturday by producing "Marias a matinee performance and "The Mascot" as the farewell bill. Big houses at each performance attested the fact that the company is one that wears well.

As interpreters of music the company cannot be truthfully recorded as being the best even of the popular priced companies that have appeared here, but their staging, marches and living pic ture adjunct more than made up for the lack of excellence in the vocal department. The company played to business throughout the week and will doubtlessly repeat the experience, should it come again. It begins a Buffalo engagement tonight.

MURDERER MEROLO NO LONGER DENIES

Admits He Is the Man Who Killed Emanuel Loro.

ASSIGNED HIS WAGES TO MR. MARTIN

When He Left Old Forge Two Years Ago There Was an Amount of $14.40 Due Him from Jermyn & Co .-- He Promises to Make a Confession the Day Before He Is Executed.

All doubts can now be dispelled concerning the identity of Murderer Crezenzo Merolo, now in the county jail under sentence of death to be hanged on Wednesday, July 1, for the killing of Emanuel Loro, of Old Forge, on Sunday, June 17, 1894. The prisoner has admit-ted that he is Merolo by signing an or-der in favor of John T. Martin for the money he had earned in Jermyn No. 1 shaft, Old Forge, which he had not been He is the insurance Official Who able to get on account of making his escape immediately after the murder. The amount is $14.40 for wages in June,

Merolo has promised to make a complete confession the day before he is hanged, and it remains to be seen whether or not he will implicate Joseph Salvi in the murder of Loro. When the crime was committed, Salvi was suspected of assisting the murderer to escape; and even further than that, was accused later of having through envy planned the crime and secured Merolo to do the job for $200. Balvi was twice arrested and brought before Al-derman Fuller by County Detective Thomas Leyshon on the charge of being an accessory, but the evidence was insufficient to send the case to court. Salvi is in Italy at present out of reach of the law. He went there a month ago, skipping away from his wife and helping himself, as she alleged, to her money and personal property. Salvi and the dead man were rival barbers, and the latter had more customers, because he charged only five cents for a shave. MEROLO ADMITS HIS IDENTITY.

When Merolo was arrested in Boston on Oct 11, 1895, he stoutly denied that he was the man who murdered Barber Loro, and insisted that he had never been in Scranton, and at a preliminary hearing before the alderman here, he persisted in his denial and continued to persist during the trial in court. The time of his execution is not far distant and realizing that it is useless to continue in his protestation of innocence and in order to give Mr. Martin the benefit of the money in Jermyn's office for him, he wrote the following order: Scranton, April 16, 1986.

Pay to my attorney, John T. Martin, or his order, the balance due me for work done at your No. 1. My check was 77. This will be your voucher and receipts.

Frank Merolo. Witness, John T. Martin.

Attorney Martin took the order to Jermyn's office in Rendham and got the money. Mr. Jermyn says that Merolo applied for work and gave his name as Crezenzo Merolo, but that in order to make an easier name to write on the books of the company it was put down as Frank Merolo. John Oakley, the miner with whom the condemed man labored, testified on the trial that Frank Merolo is the name that he was called in the mines and other witnesses swore that among the English speaking people of Old Forge who knew him he was always called Frank.

District Attorney John R. Jones con ducted the trial for the commonwealth with such thorougness and ability that the jury that heard the evidence was out only fifty minutes when they arrived at a verdict of murder of the first degree.

COLLECTING THE EVIDENCE.

It required a great deal of hard work to collect the evidence and present it clearly to the jury. Mr. Jones met with many difficulties in the way of unwilling witnesses. When the commonwealth's case closed and the defence opened Merolo went upon the witness stand and boldly asserted that was not Merolo; he said his name was Frank La Bracca, and told a story of his life. When he had finished and was turned over to Mr. Jones for cross-examination, Mr. Jones in a deliberate voice and with a wave of his hand ordered him to come down from the witness stand, saying that he did not want to see him add perjury to the crime of murder. This remark was quoted by the defendant's counsel as one of the reasons for a new trial, but at the argument Mr. Jones by a lucid chain of reasoning took up the thread of the evidence and convinced the court that the remark was justified in view of the testimony of over thirty witnesses who had preceded Merolo on the stand and had sworn that he was the right man.

The trial was begun on Dec. 2, 1895. Associated with Mr. Jones for the commonwealth was Attorney John J. Murphy, a talented young member of the bar. Merolo was represented by Attorneys John T. Martin and Joseph U. Brown. The case lasted four days, the verdict being rendered on Thursday of the same week. Reasons for a new trial were filed and an argument was made. NEW TRIAL REFUSED.

On Saturday, Jan. 25, 1896, Judge Edwards, who was on the bench during the trial, handed down an opinion refusing a new trial and on the subsequent Monday Merolo was brought to ourt and was sentenced to death. In imposing sentence Judge Edwards told the prisoner that the verdict was absolutely furt any other verdict would have ban a miscarriage of justice. Merolo shivered and qualled, and for the first time exhibited signs of fear and trembling. It is safe to say that no other man tried for murder in Lackawanna county demeaned himself with such careless indifference as he did. In cases of capital punishment the law provides that if the Supreme court is appealed to, the appeal must be taken within twenty days after sen-tence of death has been pronounced. No such appeal was taken and it was then in order for the governor to appoint the date of execution. On March 27 Governor Hastings signed the death warrant and fixed May 26 as the time, however, a respite was granted and the date was fixed as Wednesday

The arrest of Merolo was a fine piece of detective work by the Barring & Mc-Sweeney agency. He had fled from the country to Italy, but got no rest there and on May 11, 1895, he returned to New York city. When the murderer reached New York he was spotted, but managed to lose himself from the detectives. They kept his trail, however, and propared a net for him by advertising in the Boston papers for Italian laborers at $2 a day to work on a railroad. He applied for work and was caught. The warrant on which the arrest was made was issued in this city on Oct. 7, 1895, by Alderman O. B. Wright.

HUN'S BRUTAL ASSAULT.

Clubs an Eight-Year-Old Boy Over the Head with a Fence Picket in a Terrible Way.

An eight-year-old son of A. Grauman, of Capouse avenue, was murderously assaulted by a drunken Hungarian at o'clock last night.

The little Grauman boy, in company with a number of other children, threw stones at the Hungarian as he was sitting in the rear of his house, which is near the Grauman home. The Hungarian, in his drunken frenzy, tore a picket from the fence, and catching the Grauman boy brutally belabored him bout the head and shoulders.

The boy's scalp was split open and hal back covered with the marks of the club. But for the approach of some eighbors, who saw the assault from a distance, the child might have been killed. As it is he will be under the loctor's care for some time to come. After the lad was carried home posse headed by Patrolman Walsh, who had been hastily summoned, began a search of the Hungarian tenements for the assailant. It was learned that he had fled into a certain house and the place was searched from cellar to gar-

The culprit could not be found on the first tour through the house, but in coming down stairs Patrolman Walsh came across a small closet which had been overlooked and, bursting in the bolted door, discovered the fugitive hiding behind some clothing, which was hanging from pegs on the wall. It was feared that some violence might come to the prisoner, so he was taken out the rear way and hurried to the central station ouse, where he spent the night in cell 2. He stretched out on the bunk and was fast asleep in half an hour, little troubled over the possible results of his brutal assault. While the boy is painfully wounded there are no fears of a fatal outcome. Great indignation is expressed in the neighborhood and had the brute fallen into the hands of the neighbors before the police officer arrived it would have gone hard with him. Mr. Grauman and and the bower of evergreens in which several persons who witnessed the as-

This second-hand matter consisted of items reprinted from the early editions of the Free Press, and it is safe to say they were read with even greater avidity than when they originally appeared a quarter of a century ago

The front page of the cover contained reduced fac-simile of the first page of the first issue, printed on July 9, 1872, which was also a noteworthy feature of the jubilee edition. With the contributions from former owners, editors, employes and the like, and the cuts and sketches of prominent Scrantonians, the edition was all in all a paper that its aggressive young editor may well be

Italians Revive a Custom Peculiar Their Country.

THEMSELVES

Over One Thousand of Them Gathered to Celebrate the Feast Day of St. Anthony of Padua in a Way That Reminded Them of Life in Sunny

Probably the most unique fete ever held in this region took place on Spencer's hill, at Dunmore, yesterday. It began at nightfall Saturday and continued until a similar hour last night.

The fete was conducted by the Italians and is a duplicate of similar fetes held in Italy every year on the feast day of St. Anthony of Padua. This is the first year that the custom has been observed here. Saturday was the feast day of the saint, but as nearly all of the heads of families had to work the celebration was postponed until yesterday. To speak more properly it began Saturday night after the men had partaken of their evening meal.

The houses in the Italian section of the borough, adjacent to Spencer's field, were gally decorated with Chinese lanterns and flags and there was quite a display of fireworks. Then the people gathered in the church and listened to an address on the life and plety . St

Anthony, which was delivered by Rev. Dominic Landro. After this the jubilating was resumed and continued for sevral hours, the Old Forge band, composed entirely of Italians, enlivening the occasion with stirring Italian and Amer-

Before midnight the festivities were suspended and the Sabbath quietly ushered in. The church services over, yesterday, the festivities were resumed, and as on the preceding evening the Old Forge band played an important part. Next to it in importance was a pole fifty-seven feet high, which was erected on the summit of Spencer's Hill, which commands a magnificent view of Scranton and the valley north and south. This pole was greased from top to bottom and suspended from an iron circle that crowned it were several bottles of wine, a box of cigars, cakes of cheese, strings of sausages and a five dollar bill, all of which were to become the absolute property of the man who succeeded in climbing the slippery piece

All afternoon men toiled to reach the prizes dangling above their heads, but like the will-o'-the-wisp hunters they never succeeded. Sometimes the climber would reach a distance of thirty feet above the ground and then relaxing his grasp for an instant would descend with great rapidity, bringing to the ground with him those who were tolling up the pole behind him.

And all the while the band played, proving that whatever else may be said of the Old Forge musicians their staying powers and heroic devotion to duty cannot be questioned. But the greased pole and the band were not the only enlivening features of the day's exercises. There was a race between dogs and other forms of sport peculiar to Italy and the thousand or more persons present seemed to enjoy themselves hugely. In the evening the houses were resplendent with their Chinese lanterns
