Trouble Over Inability to Agree Upon the Position of City Line--- New Rule of Traction Company.

There's a deal of trouble in Traction company circles at that point on South Main avenue, where Bellevue Heights people pay their fares. The trouble is over the whereafouts of the city line. Bellevue people have an idea it is at the road near the Dodge breaker. The Traction company seem to think otherwise. In the months passed people got on the city-bound cars at Belle vue street, and even at the church farther down. They then rode to any point in the city for five cents, and when coming back some rode to Bellevue street or the church, where some conductors stopped their car and allowed them to alight without any extra five cents.

But the Traction company has become strongest, and the people down there may as well know that they must drop into the new rules as gracefully as fate. Now the conductors must collect fares when a passenger rides over the old city line even for a block, and if any one gets on at Believue street church he or she must expect to pay five cents for his ride to the Pleasant View hotel. There the Traction company again passes around the

On car 110. Taylor line, there is a conductor who obeys the new rules, as if his life depended on it-his job does. This particular conductor is an eyesore to the inhabitants. Last evening several Bellevue young men got on the car at Bellevue street. The conductor immediately collected fare of one young man and the register was one more to the good. The other new passengers were accosted, but they refused to pay and the car allowed them to drop off just as the old city line was reached. After passing Eynon street the conductor made his new round. When the young man was reached there was a row, but he had to pay another fare, and that, too, within four blocks.

THE GOSPEL TENT

The evangelists, W. H. Smith and K. C. Russell, of the Seventh Day Adventist denomination, have erected a large canvass tent on South Main avenue between Eynon and Elm streets, where they will hold services of gospel meetings commencing Sunday, July 5, at 7:45 p. m. The tent will be pleasant and cool these warm summer evenings, and in case of a storm, it will protect from rains. The services will continue every evening, excepting Saturday, all persons are notified to pay them at until further notice. The power of the once and save costs. Office in the gospel to save from sin will be the municipal building. key note of all the preaching. A variety and the nearness of that event will be spoken on. This subject will involve a presentation of the living issues of our time. All are welcome.

AT LARGE-A MULE.

Think of an estrayed mule! Such an occurrence seldom gets into the newspapers, but here is one. A big, brown, tough-hided animal with unusually well developed proclivities for exertion jumped over a four-foot fence, and, during the darksome hours of yesterday morning, wandered from the mule yard of the Hyde Park colliery, and his whereabouts is a matter of search. The poor thing has not been seen by one, at least Superintendent Thomas has not heard of it. The police will be notified of the evil that threatens our unsuspectful moments; also the board of health.

CAMPAIGN ENTHUSIASM.

The two West Side Republican organizations, the League and Central, are already taking an active interest in the presidential campaign. clubs will participate in the McKinley-Hobart ratification meeting next Saturday evening in the central city. A banner will soon be stretched across Main avenue.

NEWS NOTES AND PERSONALS. Today is the Fourth and the West Side will pay its homage to Central city enterprise. There are very few attractions for this section.

Daniel Pry and family, John Lloyd and John Jenkins, of Bellevue Heights, left last night for New York city where they will pass tomorrow. The Bellevuc, Dodge and Oxford collieries were paid yesterday.

Early yesterday morning the placid atmosphere of Luzerne street and South Main avenue was rent with the cry of a man. "My arm's broke," he said, and the windows of the nearby houses soon framed many anxious faces. The trouble was this: A tall, officious young man was trying to escort a short drunken man to the police station. He had no authority for the act. It was fun. In dragging the drunk the young man wrenched hard upon the others' arm and the pain created the cry. Finally homeward.

Druggist Humphrey Has Received a Mail Box and One for Large Packages. Funeral of Miss Hopkins.

Postmaster Vandling has responded the call for a mail box at D. W. Humphrey's drug store on Pittston averue, and Mr. Humphrey will today put in place in front of his establishment a box for letters and a large one for packages. They were received yesterday, and hereafter the people of the Twentieth ward when they want to mail anything larger than a letten will not be required to walk a mile to the corner of Cedar avenue and Birch

The Tribune, with Mr. Humphrey, shares the credit of improvement. What would be of great benefit to the people in that section now that they have the boxes is if Mr. Vandling would issue an order having the carrier come around to collect the mail. At present he comes no farther at night than Terppe's drug store, and the latest collection now made in the Twentieth ward is at 3 in the afternoon.

FUNERAL OF MISS HOPKINS. At 9.30 yesterday morning the remains f Miss Kate Hopkins were borne from the residence of her sister. Mrs. Philip Foy, of Pittston avenue, to St. John's church, wher a high mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. H. P. Burke. He preached a sermon, which reflected on the certainty of death, but of the uncertainty of the time of its approach, and therefore the necessity of being at all times prepared. Rev.
