FINGER-PRINT DETECTION.

As a Combination of the Bertillon Method it Enables Identification.

By a combination of the Bertillon method of measurement with the finger-print system any prisoner can be identified with almost absolute certainty and in a short space of time.

Mr. Galton calculates that the chance of two finger-prints being identical is less than 1 in 64,000,000,000, and when we consider the relatively small numbers of the criminal population, and that other personal evidence would be available in any doubtful case, mistaken identity ought now to be a thing of the past.

The method of indexing finger-prints proposed by Mr. Galton is at first sight somewhat complicated, but with a little practice we are told that about five minutes would suffice for the complete verification of any one of 2,522 sets forming a directory.

A specimen directory of 300 sets has been given, together with numerous finger-prints. The method of obtaining the prints is to press the thumb or finger upon a plate of copper which has previously been coated with a very thin film of printer's ink. The inked fingers are then pressed or rolled upon the card which is kept as a record. Although fingerprints have been used as a sign manual from the earliest times, yet it is only recently that they have been studied from a scientific point of view, and the evidence accumulated is as yet insufficient to enable us to realize their value to the anthropologist. Now that a good system of classification has been worked out, it is to be hoped that observers will multiply rapidly, and that the bulk of the material at our disposal will soon be considerable.

HE SNEEZED A BULLET.

A Peculiar Experience of a Man Who Was Wounded in the Civil War.

From the Chicago Record.

Colonel Sidney Cooke, of Herrington, Kas., one of the managers of the National Soldiers' home, tells of a peculiar experience in the army during the civil war.

At the outbreak of the war he was a strapping New England boy, with strength and vitality which stood him well during his army life.

After taking part in several engagements, Colonel Cooke was shot in the head and left on the battlefield as dead.

The Federal surgeons from the field and the Confederates soon occupied it. Colonel Cooke, who was then a private, was aroused to consciousness by some one tugging at his boots.

The boots were very fine and the pride of his boyish heart, having been given to him by the dear ones at home.

"Ain't you dead, Yankee?" asked the Confederate, as he caressed tugging to remove the boots from the feet of the wounded boy.

On being assured that Cooke was not dead a comrade was effected. The Confederate brought the Union soldier some water and carried him to a Confederate surgeon. In return he secured the coveted boots.

Cooke had a long convalescence, and finally recovered sufficiently to be sent to Andersonville prison, where he suffered in addition to the privations of prison life, great pain from his wound.

This suffering continued even after his release and his discharge from the army at the close of the war.

One day, long after war was over, Colonel Cooke, who had settled in Kansas, was seized with a violent spell of sneezing. Just in the midst of it the bullet was expelled from his nose.

THE BURNING TREE.

It is Found in India, and its Touch is Much Dreaded by the Natives.

From the Detroit Free Press.

There has lately been added to the collection of plants at the botanic gardens at Madras, India, a specimen of a strange tree, writes an East Indian correspondent to London. It is in size Stomach, sometimes called waterbrash, and burning pain, distress, nausea, dyspepsia, are cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. This it accomplishes because with its wonderful power as a blood purifier, Hood's Sarsaparilla gently tones and strengthens the stomach and digestive organs, invigorates the liver, creates an appetite, gives refreshing sleep, and raises the health tone.

For over 12 years I suffered from sour with severe pains across my shoulders, and great distress. I had violent nausea which would leave me very weak and faint, difficult to get my breath. These spells came oftener and more severe. I did not receive any lasting benefit from physicians, but found such happy effects from a trial of Hood's Sarsaparilla, that I took several bottles and men to always keep in the house. I am now able to do all my own work, which for six years I have been unable to do. My husband and son have also been greatly benefited by Hood's Sarsaparilla—for pains in the back, and after the grip. I gladly recommend this grand blood medicine.

Absolutely Pure

The Royal Baking Powder makes sweeter, lighter, finer-flavored and more wholesome bread, biscuit and cake than any other leavening agent. It is of higher strength, and therefore more economical. All government and scientific tests show that as a leavening agent it is actually without an equal.

Royal is undoubtedly the purest and most reliable baking powder offered to the public.—U. S. Gov't Chemist's Report.

scarcely more than a bush, but other individuals of its species are known to have attained, in their habitat in the Himalayas, Burma and the Malacca peninsula, the dimensions of a large tree, from fifty to seventy-five feet in height. The Madras specimen is surrounded by a strong railing, which bears the sign: "Dangerous; all persons are forbidden to touch the leaves or branches of this tree."

It is, therefore, a forbidden tree in the midst of the garden, but no one is tempted to touch it, for it is known to be a "burning tree." The name is a misnomer, for the tree stings rather than burns. Beneath the leaves there are stings comparable to those of nettles, which, when touched, pierce the skin and secrete a fluid which certainly has a burning effect.

The sting leaves no outward sign, but the sensation of pain exists sometimes for months, and is especially keen on damp days, or when the place which has been wounded is plunged in water.

The natives in the part of Burma where this tree grows are in such terror of it that they when they perceive the peculiar odor which it exhales, if they happen to touch it they fall on the ground and roll over and over on the earth with shrieks. Dogs touched by it yelp and run, biting and tearing the part of the body which has been touched.

The sting which has been in contact with a burning tree ran like a mad thing, biting everything and everybody that it could reach. A missionary at Mandalay, who investigated a leaf of the plant with his finger, suffered agony for several weeks, and for ten months felt occasional pains in his finger.

SPOTS OF RUST.

They Were but Trifles, but They Helped to Unravel a Murder.

From the Chicago Chronicle.

Chicago had a chief of detectives fifteen or sixteen years ago who compared in many respects with the best European police. He did some work which for neatness and adroit application was equal to anything that Gaboriau invented. I have in mind now a murder case in which he figured. Some unknown person had shot a farmer living in the suburbs of Chicago through the heart. The murder happened in the dead of night and the victim was decaying out of the house to meet his death.

The farmer's wife was suspected of being a trifle too fond of a dull-witted farm hand who had been discharged by the dead man, and was then working in Chicago. This fellow was promptly placed under arrest. A pawn ticket for a revolver was found in his pocket. It was a cheap weapon, and very little significance was attached to the fact that the man should have owned it and pawned it at that particular time. He gave a reasonable account of his movements on the night of the crime, and the murdered man's wife was firm in her protestations that she had not seen him for weeks.

During the inquest, however, the detectives observed that the bullet which came out of the dead man's heart was marked in a peculiar way. It had scratches on one side, as though there were defects in the pistol from which it was fired. Examination of the revolver found in the pawn shop showed two spots of rust in the chamber near the muzzle. The detectives fired the weapon three times into a barrel of water and the balls were marked exactly like the bullet that killed the farmer. A number of other pistols of the same make and calibre were obtained and subjected to the same test, but none of the other bullets were marked in the same manner as those from the farm hand's pistol. It appeared, therefore, that the latter weapon had been used in killing the man, but while the detective skill that discovered the damaging fact was loudly extolled, shrewd lawyers got hold of the case for the defense and succeeded in getting the man acquitted.

WHERE WOMEN RULE.

The President Refuses to be Disturbed When She is Engaged Privately.

From the Chicago Post.

The messenger came in haste. "Madam," he said to the president of the Board of County Commissioners, "your presence is urgently requested."

"I can't come," she replied, promptly. "I was told to impress upon you."

persisted the messenger, "that it was a matter of the greatest importance."

"I can't come," she repeated, sharply. "The affairs of the county are in a most perilous condition."

"Let 'em stay in that condition," she interrupted.

"Your signature is needed to various documents that—"

"Send 'em up here and I'll sign them if I get time."

"You have not been to your office for nearly a week, and—"

"And probably won't be there for another week," she said, with asperity.

"There are at least a dozen men and women who have been here every day to see you on pressing official business that will no longer brook delay."

"It will have to."
