AIRWAY IS NOT YET EXPLORED

Men Cannot Advance Until They Secure Passageway Behind Them.

ADDING TO THE RELIEF FUND

Contributions of Employees of the L. I. & S. Company--Appeal from Bishop O'Hara Read in all the Catholic Churches of the Scranton Diocese--Requiem Mass at St. Peter's Cathedral Today.

It has been impossible as yet to attempt the exploration of the airway at the Twin shaft, reached Friday afternoon, by the rescuers in the slope.

The rule that the men must not advance until they secure the passageway behind them has so far prevented any additional loss of life and Inspector McDonald, who is directing the work of rescue, insists on this rule being strictly adhered to. For this reason the exploration of the airway is delayed.

The slope is sufficiently cleared to allow men to crawl through to the point where the airway branches off, but on account of the precaution that the inspector insists on the men will not be allowed into the airway until the intervening portion of the slope has been safely timbered. Foreman Ryden says that the exploration may be attempted today.

Inspectors Roderick and Brennan deny that they agree with Inspector Stein that the work of rescue ought to be suspended. Inspector Roderick in a conversation with a Tribune reporter said without misgivings that the stories about the air in the slope being bad are absolutely untrue. He said that many courses through the slope where the men are at work, he said, is better than it ever was and the report is that it is charged with a percentage of gas that borders on the dangerous are purely imaginative.

Mr. Roderick refuses to have anything to say on the question further than this. The operators of the mine, he contends, are the ones who ought to determine whether or not they should continue the search for the bodies; it is not within the duties of the inspectors' commission to deal with this question.

THE RELIEF FUND.

The prospects of raising a sufficient fund for the Pittston sufferers were never brighter than at present. Bishop O'Hara's appeal sent out to the one hundred and seventy or more churches in his diocese means that addition of many thousands of dollars to the funds of the general relief committee have gone or are preparing to go to the large cities of the East to make personal appeals to the capitalists associated with the coal mining interests, and other moneyed men who might be urged upon to contribute. Those who have already been abroad on this most noble mission report very gratifying success. A plain statement of the generally impoverished condition of the coal regions and the inability of the people of Pittston to care for the afflicted families always has the effect of winning a satisfactory contribution. Simpson & Watkins have some collection, noted in another place, instances another channel through which funds are coming in. Everybody who has heard of the calamity and its results stands ready and willing to do something and it is merely a question of how the contribution will be seen that is being deliberated upon at present.

Employees of the L. I. & S. company's works, through Foremen H. C. Swartz and Michael W. Kelly, have sent to the relief committee the handsome sum of $25. This is an example which will no doubt be imitated in every large industrial institution in this locality.
