Mott Homestead on Jackson Street Is Being Torn Down to Make Way for a More Modern Structure.

The old Mott homestead-one of the oldest landmarks on this side-is being torn down by its owner, L. P. Williams, to make room for a more modern structure. The house is situated on the day morning from his late residence on northern side of Jackson street, be- Scranton street to St. Patrick's church tween Lincoln and Rebecca avenues. It has quite a history and the tale was Rev. Father Whalen preached the fuunfolded to a Tribune reporter last neral sermon. The services were atnight by Mrs. Frank W. When at work in Briggs'. he sold the farm Mr. Kilmer reserved three acres of sacred ground. the family cemetery was located, and on this plot the "Mott" homestead was built during the winter of '54-'55. Up to a few years ago the mouldering tomb-stones of the sturdy ploneers could be seen staring from the foliage of the Mott garden.

In the spring of 1860 Mr. Kilmer moved West and settled near Jaynesville in Rock township, Michigan. His daughter, Harriet C. (Mrs. Mott), about that time met and married F. W. Mott and since that time until a few years, ago they have taken care of the old home. This is why the house is called the Mott homestead by the present generation. It is a venerable structure. Though suffering in years, when compared to its aged mother homestead down the street, yet the Mott home looks ancient and picturesque. The stories are two in number and in the upper there are three little peep holes, called in those days windows. The interior arrangement is of pleasing simplicity. There is the customary spacious vestibule leading to the rooms of the first floor. Every apartment is square and the stairs are narrow and quaint. But the porch is the best of all. It is a small affair with four supporting pillars of Colonial style. Add to the features the clinging vines and surrounding shrubbery and we have quite a pleasing dwelling of "ye olden time."

In tearing down the house the workmen found the timber to be in fairly good condition. In the rear garret an old spinning wheel was discovered, This tells a story in itself. It is a regu-Mrs. Mott chatted at length about the early days of Hyde Park. She remembers when only eleven houses could be counted between the old White hotel in Main avenue to the back road. There were several farms but the coal craze ate them as the years advanced.

People who wish to witness the passing of the "ye" have only a few days left; the Oram house is being repaired and the Mott homestead is cringing under the feet of Progress.

Speaking of the development of Hyde Park Mrs. Mott says that in '60-'62 three brick buildings were erected here. They were the Potter and Mears homes and Fairchild's hotel. It was after the war that Hyde Park took a good leap forward and for the past ten years the advance, says Mrs. Mott, has been

MARKETS AND STOCKS

Wall Street Review.

New York, July 21.-The announce ment that the New York city banks had determined to place a part of their gold at the disposal of the government, thus restoring the treasury gold reserve to the hundred million mark. changed the temper of speculation at the stock exchange from weakness to strength. This had a particularly good effect in London and the early cables brought higher prices and numerous orders for St. Paul, Louisville and Nashville and some of the railway mortgages dealt in abroad, estimates place this buying as high as 25,000 shares of stocks and $500,000 railway young lady was going by that corner and other bonds. In addition to these favorable factors it was stated that the banking interests were at work on a plan by which it is believed gold shipments can be diminished. Various suggestions have been made but nothing definite has been agreed upon as yet. Even if the conferences on this subject should come to naught one thing can be relied upon, and that is the city banks will do everything within reason to help the treasury department. Some bankers want to place iages will be solemnized. Alexander their entire stock at the disposal of the government subject to call by Secre-tary Carlisle. This manifestation of confidence stiffened United States four shillings of 1928, and the bonds advanced to 114, a gain of 1/4 from the recent low point. Buying of securities was stimulated during the afternoon by a falling off in demand for sterling exchange and actual transactions in the latter were reported at figures 1/4c. below the quotations current at the opening. The decline in the exchange ought to stop exports of the metal on Thursday and it probably will. The gain in stocks at one time during the day was equal to 15 to 4 per cent., every prominent issue on the list participating in the upward movement. The industrials, Grangers and Internationals, however, were most conspicuous in the rise. Near the close the market suddenly dropped ½ to 3 per cent. slump was generally credited to sales by a leading bear operator who has unusually successful of late. Other big bear traders stood aloof, however, and no adequate explanation

Burlington and Quincy leading. for the drop could be obtained. Speculation left off irregular and in the main weak. Net changes show losses of 1/4 al% per cent., except for Northwest, General Electric, St. Paul and Kansas and Texas preferred, which gained %al per cent. Lake Shore, however, gained and Minnesota Iron 5 per cent. Total sales were 353,559 shares.
