TRAMPS CONCLUDED NOT TO RIDE.

Conductor and Brakeman Route an Ugly Mob with Shotgun. Racine, Wis., July 27.—There was a fight at Western Union Junction late yesterday afternoon between a freight train crew on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul and twenty-five tramps.

FORESAW HER DEATH IN A DREAM.

St. Louis Woman Warned of Her Drowning in Eagle Lake, Wis. Racine, Wis., July 27.—The funeral of Margaret E. O'Connor, the St. Louis woman drowned at Eagle Lake, took place at St. Patrick's church this afternoon, and the body was forwarded to Marysville, Mo., for burial.

FREE SILVER DRIVES HIM CRAZY.

Illinois Man Argues Politics with a Pair of Corn Knives. Assumption, Ill., July 27.—Arthur Osburn caused considerable excitement among the citizens here early this morning by running about the street with a corn knife in each hand, saying God had deputed him to perform miracles and preach the gospel and free silver. He then went to his home, smashed in the doors and windows and demolished everything in reach, his family taking refuge at neighbors.

OUTBREAK OF PERUVIAN INDIANS.

American Colonists Threatened by the Savage Tribes at Peru. Lima, Peru, July 27.—Peru has been received that Indians are threatening the colony at Peru, where many Americans and English have settled. The telegraph offices there have been abandoned and detailed news of the outbreak is anxiously awaited. An armed force has been dispatched to the assistance of the colonists.

CAREER OF FIERY THOMAS WATSON

A Glimpse at Some of the Characteristics of the Populist Candidate.

STUDY OF BRYAN'S OTHER MATE

The Georgia Statesman an Ideal Specimen of the Oratorical Wind Bag—Delights in Abusing Democrats and Raising a Row Whenever Opportunity is Offered.

Bureau of The Tribune, No. 501 14th St., N. W., Washington, July 27.

The most remarkable and picturesque national convention ever held was the one which completed its labors—on, from all accounts, it was with much labor that it finally adjourned—at St. Louis on Saturday last. The proceedings of this most peculiar gathering were composed principally of wind and whisks. If anything, wind predominated, whisks only lending picturesque to the occasion. The mongrel ticket nominated—Bryan and Watson—is certainly a unique one.

Tom Watson is the biggest blather-skite that ever occupied a seat in either branch of the most peculiar gathering in the history of the world. He is a little, wizened-up man between 40 and 45 years of age, with a large coccy-shaped head. Unlike most of his Populist friends, his face is clean shaven. He is very and impetuous speaker, always looking out and getting into a row with somebody. Upon one occasion Watson made himself very unpopular among his colleagues in the house by charging all of them with being drunkards. Before he was tolerated as a humorist, but afterwards he was ostracized by even men of Jerry Simpson's stripe.

Watson took particular delight in abusing Democrats, especially members of that party from his own state—Georgia. He liked to stir up Speaker Crisp, and oftentimes the preceding officer was compelled to sit down on Watson very hard. It was Watson who made ex-Judge Cobb, of Georgia, then a member of congress, famous by calling the attention of the house to his outburst of the English language. Watson asserted that during a speech Judge Cobb got off the now famous expression: "Mr. Speaker, where am I at?" Whether or not Judge Cobb was guilty of making such a break I am unable to say. The House, however, failed to record it, the chances are that Judge Cobb never uttered the sentence. Judge Cobb is a very learned man, and was considered one of the best lawyers on the Democratic side of the house.

The climax of Watson's career in the house came on a hot day in July, when General Wheeler, of Alabama, called him to account for publicly besmirching members of congress, by accusing some of them of being drunkards. One of the sensational chapters in the record of the Fifty-second congress. Watson was on the defensive most of the time, he was blazed during his explanation, and finally, on a vote, the house refused to let him proceed with his explanation.

The trouble arose out of a campaign book, which Watson had written. It was in the characteristic vein of invective and extreme assertion used by the Populists, and was bitter in arraignment public men for alleged infidelity to the cause of free silver. Speaking of the house of representatives, Watson's book asserted: "Lack of common business prudence was never more glaring. Drunken members have reeled about the aisles, a disgrace to the republic. Drunken conductors have started out with two guns and banged away whenever a tramp showed himself. The gang was routed and fled into the open fields. One of them had his finger shot off and a second one received a flesh wound in the arm. The train proceeded to Chicago without a tramp on board."

General Wheeler read this and other assertions from the book, and then proceeded to lash the Georgian. "I want to members of the house and asked them if they had ever seen 'drunken speakers debating grave issues,' and every gentleman replied that he had not. I asked them if they had ever seen 'drunken members reeling in the aisles,' and they all said they had not."

Watson sought to explain, but was interrupted from many quarters. This made him defiant. "I want it to be understood," he exclaimed, "that no representative from New York can bulldoze the gentleman from Georgia in the exercise of his rights on this floor. He may as well understand that now. I stand here to defend every line in the book, and will do it against all comers, whether from the north or south. I have said that every word in that book is literally true, and all men who have seen me keeping their eyes open and wanting to admit the facts, will admit these facts as fairly stated."

The scene that followed was a boisterous one and objections came from all sides. A vote was taken as to whether Watson should be allowed to proceed, and by 139 to 25 Watson was allowed to explain, the feeling being that it was only fair to hear his side of the case. "I want no matter of grace from this Democratic majority, which seeks to hiss me down when I am defending my character here on the floor of this house," Mr. Watson continued. "Jeffersonian Democracy grants to a man freedom of speech and freedom of press, and if you want to howl me down, do it, and I will answer you in the same way. The fairest sense of justice that resides in the heart of the American people. I seek your grace, I seek your mercy. The only crime charged in that paragraph which a Democrat takes offense at is that he got drunk at the barroom the umbrella on his back and the quill in his hand, and the record shows that members came up here on a previous day and admitted that they were drinkers at it. You have planted the tree, why should you wonder at the fruit?"

There was another chorus of protests, members asserting that Watson was violating the rule which permitted an explanation, but not a reiteration of the charge.

Speaker Crisp put the question: "Shall the gentleman of Georgia (Watson) be permitted to proceed?" The question was decided in the negative. This closed the exciting controversy, and "where am I at?" passed into the common vocabulary of slang. Aside from Watson's dramatic en-

DIVORCE FOLLOWS THE BIKE. Mrs. Van Hindes Brilliant Red Bloomers Settled the Matter. Paterson, N. J., July 27.—George Van Hindle, a silk designer, will apply to Chancellor McGill for an absolute divorce from his wife Henrietta on statutory grounds. The bicycle is the cause of the Van Hindes domestic troubles. They were married three years ago and lived happily until about nine months ago, when Mrs. Van Hindle began riding a wheel. She had not owned it long before her rides extended far into the night time and when her husband protested she purchased a pair of brilliant red bloomers, which she wore to aggravate him. This led to a quarrel and the pair separated about four months ago.

Since then Van Hindle has heard stories of his wife holding clandestine meetings with strange men, and last Monday two of his friends were troubled to follow his wife when she went out to ride that night. When they returned they told Van Hindle that they had seen his spouse enter a road house in Passaic and spend several hours there with a prominent Passaician, who conducted a large business house on Main street, and who is also a Sunday school superintendent. On the following day Van Hindle instructed his counsel to begin divorce proceedings. The latter and his client both refuse to divulge as yet the name of the Sunday school superintendent.
