

DISTRESSING WAIL FROM GEORGIA

Cash is Required to Keep the Unaffiliated in Line. MINE OWNERS ARE NOT LIBERAL. They Have Not Offered Even Silver Dollars to Help the Democrats in Battling in the Interest of the White Metal.—The Republicans Are Looking Up Bryan's Record.

Bureau of the Tribune, 501 Fourteenth Street, N. W., Washington, August 3. The South is getting more and more crying out for money. Upon the heels of Illinois, Ohio and Indiana claiming to be pivotal states, comes now the lament from Georgia that the former empire state of the South needs to be brought into the Democratic fold.

In the midst of all this, great consternation exists among the Democratic leaders down there and they write here that without money the state will be lost to Bryan, and most certainly to Sewall. They say, moreover, that the Republicans are fully alive to the situation and are preparing to take advantage of every opportunity. They will pour more money into the hands of their candidates than they have ever before.

A call will be made on the Western mine owners, but as yet they have offered no funds voluntarily to the committee which is doing almost a land office business for them and their private concerns. It had been expected that the silver mine owners would do some things but as yet they have given nothing, yet they have "hugged" everything in sight so far as the Democrats are concerned. The hope is expressed that they will shell out their silver coin when the time comes to vote for Mr. Bryan.

But this is not at all certain, either. Yet, whatever they may give to Mr. Jones and his committee, the money for helping the congressional committee also. Since the mine owners are to be the beneficiaries of this movement, if it is successful, it is as necessary to carry the house as it is to elect Bryan.

It is more than probable that the Democratic national headquarters will be located here. The national committee of the silver party have established themselves in this city and headquarters have also been secured here for the Populist committee. Inasmuch as the three committees are expected to work harmoniously together to promote Mr. Bryan's election it is considerably desirable that they should all have headquarters in the same city. It is thought that the first meeting of the Democratic committee will be held in New York about the time of the notification meeting. Senator Jones is expected to attend the meeting, and will probably issue a call at once for a meeting of the committee. The members can hardly be brought together, however, before August 12, as a number of them want to attend the New York notification meeting on that date.

The officers of the Republican congressional committee, in addition to sending out a great mass of sound money literature, are engaged in hunting up the record of Candidate Bryan with a view to showing that he has not been constantly a friend of silver as his admirers would have the country believe. It is said that he failed to vote upon the proposition to pass the Bland silverbill over the President's veto, and that he was the secretary of the committee, is authority for the statement that Mr. Bryan voted in his own district for a sound money Democratic candidate for congress in preference to a Populist, who was running on a silver platform. The latter assertion is of a character, that the Democrats with delight. The charge that Mr. Bryan had not been a consistent Democrat has been one of the obstacles to his hearty indorsement by strong party men. It will relieve them to find that even at some remote period he was willing to yield his convictions on the money question to his sense of party loyalty.

The meeting of National Chairman Hanna and Senator Platt in New York on Saturday last is construed to mean that the latter is to remain at the head of the Republican organization in the Empire state, despite the fact that Chairman Hanna stoutly maintains that there is only one Republican in New York and that is the one over which he presides—the national committee. Senator Platt is now the leader of the regular Republican organization in the state and his recognition by the national chairman entrenches him more firmly than ever behind the breast-plate of power. It is true that ex-Senator Warner Miller was the leader of the McKinley forces in New York during the hunt for delegates to the national convention and he naturally thought he ought to be recognized by Mr. Hanna. Senator Miller is said to be very much disgruntled over the turn in affairs and has fled up the state to head off Platt at the state convention if possible. Miller cannot now afford to break with the McKinley people even were he ever so anxious to do so. He must either stand by his guns and take his medicine or remain out in the cold entirely.

Senator Quay is responsible for the bringing together of Chairman Hanna and Senator Platt. It is said that Senator Quay has more influence over Platt than any of his many political friends. It was Senator Quay who first brought Mr. Hanna and Mr. Platt together at St. Louis. They first met in Senator Quay's room at the Southern hotel. It was on the Friday preceding the meeting of the convention that the Ohioan and the New Yorker first met. Senator Quay had to do considerable coaxing to induce Mr. Platt to meet Mr. Hanna outside of his own room. Platt wanted "the mountain to go to Mahomet" that is, he wanted Mr. Hanna to come to him, which the latter declined to do. After considerable persuasion on the part of Quay both leaders agreed to compromise by meeting in his room. It was then and there that their friendship began. Mr. Hanna had formed an erroneous opinion of Mr. Platt and Mr. Platt had formed the same sort of an opinion of Mr. Hanna. After they had conversed a few minutes and Senator Quay had made some satisfactory explanations in behalf of both of the gentlemen they came to the conclusion that they were both in error and they departed much better friends than when they met.

It is said that Mr. Hanna now has a very high regard for Mr. Platt and Vice President. Judging from the reports from New York concerning their meeting there on Saturday Mr. Platt will be the chief dispenser of federal patronage in the Empire state in case McKinley is elected President, of which there seems to be little doubt now. Mr. Quay is the younger brother of the position of vantage he now holds in his own state over his political enemies.

While Secretary Carlisle has not yet said openly that he would not support the nominees of the Chicago convention it is believed that he will either support a third ticket, if one is put in the field, or he will remain silent during the campaign. His son, W. K. Carlisle, who is a prominent lawyer in Chicago, is outspoken in his opposition to Bryan and Carlisle, at the present the younger Carlisle is visiting his parents in Washington, and he probably voiced the sentiments of his father when he said that "the heads of great business establishments in Chicago, men like William Gage and Charles F. Field, are active in the movement to put a third ticket in the field which shall stand for real Democracy. Their coadjutors are men who have always taken a leading part in the councils of the Democratic party. I do not regard Mr. Bryan as a Democrat, and do not believe he ever was one. In my opinion I do not consider that the convention which nominated him was constituted of Democratic ideas. How to defeat Bryan is to my mind the essential thing, and I shall follow that policy which seems best fitted to achieve that result, whether it means support of McKinley or of a third Democratic ticket."

Mr. Bryan has decided to speak in Washington on his return from the north. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Bryan, and already there are a number of entertainments of a social character being prepared for them. Their visit will be in striking contrast to those paid to the capital of the nation by the United States congress. They went out very little in society, even when he was a member of the house, and since then his coming and going has not been noticed. But there is no place in the world where the opinions of people change so rapidly as in Washington, and the most prominent political office or the probability of getting one to evolve an obscure person into a social lion. The society of all national capitalists, however, are patented on this plan, and so Washington will do no more for Mr. and Mrs. Bryan than London, Berlin or Madrid would if the political conditions were the same. Mrs. Bryan was not a favorite in Washington, probably because she was not known. She cared little for the glories of the capital and he said that she did not like to be in the fashionable as so many congressmen and their wives do on $5,000 a year. Mrs. Bryan is now coming prepared to discard her old wardrobe for one of lower cut, and the presidential nominee for the first time in his life, will possibly don an evening suit. Washington loves to honor presidential nominees, and every ambitious person will pay court to the simple Nebraska woman with the hope that they will receive the nomination of the party. It is said that she should see the social world in this city standing in the great red room of the white house.

The Coroner Investigates the Atlantic City Railroad Disaster.

BIG ROAD OFFICIALS ARE PRESENT. Superintendent Dayton, of the West Jersey, Explains the Block System. Mr. Deice, of the Reading, Admits That Trains Are Run at Full Speed Over Crossings.

Atlantic City, Aug. 3.—The inquest by Coroner McLaughlin into the deaths resulting from the collision between the Reading railroad express and the Bridgeton excursion train on the West Jersey railroad on the Meadows on last Thursday evening began today. The greater part of the testimony heard today was in explanation of the workings of the block signal system. In anticipation of a big crowd the inquest was not held in the stuffy little city hall, but in Old Fellows hall. At no time, however, was the hall overcrowded, and it would appear that the great work had already ceased to be a nine days' wonder—that the residents have resumed their normal occupation of gathering in the dollars of visitors and the latter have taken up their pursuits of pleasure seeking and creating against us. We worship the same God and follow the same Christ that you do. The same Bible which enshrines your faith is the basis of ours. After a session of three days we will proceed to organize the churches in this and adjoining counties.
