INVOLUNTARY ASCENSION.

A Scene Painter's Flight Into the Air at the Opern House.

Stage Carpenter Hull, of the Opera house, had an exciting experience yes-

The scenery at the Opera house is being retouched by J. Chauncey Gill, of New York, who is a noted seenle artist. Unil is also an adept in the business and has been beloing Gift. Mr. Gill had just finished a piece of scenery which had been hauled high into the air, and he directed that, who was working below to lower the scene. Hull did not realize how heavy it was until he had it unfastened and then it came down on a run. Mr. Hull saw that the piece would be completely destroyed if it struck, so he tightened his hold upon the rope and was drawn up, and the scene slowly decended. As he went up he was knocked quite hard against the grooves and other pieces of scenery, but luckily was not injured. After the piece had reached the floor safely, Huil slid down the rope, but fittle damaged by his sudden ascension, while he had saved a valuable piece of scenery.

TENT MEETINGS DISTURBED.

A Gang of Rowdies Will Be Arrested. Sixteen Warrants Out.

tent meetings which are being conducted by Mr. Moore, on Lathrope avenue, have each night been disturbed by a gang of rowdies who gather outside and make so much noise that it is impossible to go on with the meetings. It is safe to say there will be no more disturbance in that quarter as sixteen of the party have been placed under arrest.

Joseph Stanton had been secured to keep order outside the tent. On Thursday the gang, armed with an accordeon. made their appearance at the usual hour and proceeded to raise a rumpus. Stanton interfered but could do little for the whole number suddenly turned upon him and knocked him down. Mr. Moore heard the noise and came out of the tent and made the boys release Stan-Stanton knew most of the parties and had sixteen warrants sworn out. He will make it warm for the offenders.
