MURDERER VAN HORN PAYS ANOTHER VISIT

Revisits the Scene of His Crime a Second Time.

Watchers Were on the Porch of the House and Gave Chase .- Were They Afraid! -- The Precautions Taken

Funeral of Mrs. Westcott Today.

HE ESCAPES IN THE DARKNESS

A startling feature has been added to the Westcott murder case. Van Horn, the slayer of the woman, is believed to have made a second visitation to the scene of his crime. There is now no doubt in the minds of the family of the murdered woman, and the police are forced to admit it, that the breaking of the padlock on the cellar door, during the early hours of Saturday morning, was the work of Van Horn, it being explained that he returned to get the razor which he knew could be readily identified as belonging to him, and which if found would be the most positive kind of evidence against him. On account of man's bell. the terror which this bold act inhelp. Before assistance arrived she was badly burned about the arms and the household two men have kept Early yesterday morning the two watches, whose names are withheld for obvious reasons, saw a man, who they declare was Van Horn, come around the corner from Spruce street veloped, had lighted a candle which and pass down Franklin avenue. The men were sitting on the front plazza and both jumped to their feet when Van Horn, or the man they declare was Van Horn, hove in sight. He did not see them on the dark plazza and was peering into the house. Alarmed by their rising to their feet, he started off at a rapid walk.

Either through excitement or fear they allowed him to get the distance of two or three lots down the street before they attempted to follow. When they came out of the gate he broke into a run and dodged into Page court. When the pursuers, if indeed they could rightly be called such, reached the head of the court the fugitive was no where to be seen. They claim they made a search for him but in the excitement it is possible they may have neglected to make a very thorough search.

NEW WATCHER ENGAGED.

The watchers of Sunday night were replaced last night by Special Officer George Wickenhoffer, who armed himself with a shot gun and swore that if Van Horn again came about that the hunt for him would be brought to a sudden termination.

The impression that has gone forth that Mrs. Westcott was somewhat partial to Van Horn's attentions does a great injustice to the unfortunate woman, the family claims. It is three years since he boarded at Westcott's. and during all that time he was nevhouse, and his hanging about the first week in February. After that the Nay Aug; F. W. The funeral of Mrs. Westcott will take place this afternoon. Services will be conducted at the house at 12 o'clock noon, and the remains will be taken on the 1.20 p. m. Delaware and Hudson train to Jermyn for interment. Up to midnight Van Horn remained uncaptured. The general belief is that ne is still hiding about the city, and that he will before many days fall nto the hands of the police. The county commissioners stated vesterday that they do not propose at present to offer a reward for his

DISMISSED FROM SCHOOL

Taylor Pupils Ordered by the Health Board to Be Vaccinated---Schools Are Depleted.

Down in Taylor there was much troude among school children yesterday when the public schools of that borough tried to open for the term. The Taylor poard of health has decreed that no child can enter the borough schools unless each one has been vaccinated and schedule time. can present a physicians' certificate to that effect. That was what caused the

When the schools were opened at ! o'clock the teachers accosted each pupil and asked for the certificate. The vast majority of them had not obeyed the health board's mandate, and, consequently, the careless ones were dismissed and are debarred from re-entering until such time as each can show the doctor's statement. As an example of the state of things the Taylor high school is quite forcible. In each room, out of about a half hunired pupils, only two or three could remain at school. This was the case in very department from the infant to the highest grade. And in all other buildings the condition was the same. ENTIRE SYSTEM MIXED.

The entire school system in the borough is out of running order. The teachers cannot arrange classes, as the pupils now in a whole building would not make up a reasonable sized class. The schools will be crippled for at least a week, as it takes that length of time for the vaccination to take effect. During yesterday and until a late hour last night the local physicians were pestered with juvenile patients. Dr. Houser seems to be the espeial sufferer. He is connected with the board of health and the pupils erroneously think that his work is consequently not to be paid for. Dr. Houser's and other offices were crowded last night, in some instances over a half hundred children being in the line of succession for treat ment. Over 300 children have already been vaccinated. The supply of necessary material has run out, and, pending the arrival of more, the physicians are rest-

COMPANY NOT TO BLAME.

Coroner's Jury's Verdict on the Death of Mrs. Kawalchick. After hearing much testimony the coroner's jury, inquiring into the man-ner of the death of Mrs. Mary Kawal-chick, agreed upon a verdict to the effect that she died as the result of being struck and run over by a Peckville street car at Dutch Gap on Sunday evening, Aug. 23; and the Scranton Traction company and its employes were exonerated from all blame for the accident, for the reason that the latter used all means in their power to stop the car and prevent the serious result The jury could not agree upon the speed of the car from the conflicting testimony and let that branch of the case pass without comment. Coronie Longstreet was careful to bring out all the testimony possible so that the blame could be fixed where it belonged. A question arose as to whether or not the men in the wagon were under the influence of liquor. A man named Smith said that the two men were Against His Further Return. stunned after falling out of the wagon, and he had them carried into his house. "Did they appear under the influence of liquor?" asked Coroner Longstreet.

"No, they didn't," said Smith. "Could you smell liquor on them?" queried the coroner, and Smith's reply set the court room in roars. It was as "Well if anyone can smell liquor on a person my wife can, and she didn't smell any on them." John Kawalchick, husband of the dead woman, swore that the horse was never before that known to get frightened at a street car, and what frightened it that evening and caused it to careen into the track, was the noise of the car produced by its high rate of speed and the clanging of the motor-
