WEST SIDE EVENTS.

History of an Unfortunate Family Recalled by the Arrest of One of Its Members.

Eighteen years ago the family of Thomas Williams lived on the West Side. Now, it is broken up by deaths and the misfortune of the members, and its interesting history was recalled on Saturday morning when Maggie Williams, one of the children, was arrested and lodged in the West Side station house on a charge of vagrancy.

This Maggie Williams was the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Williams. The family formerly lived on North Hyde Park avenue, but suddenly a blight fell over the home and the then growing Hyde Park was started with some peculiar happenings. The parents indirectly accused a West Side young man, who is now living, of the betrayal of the daughter. The case was aired for a time, but nothing in the way of prosecution was done.

A few weeks after the birth of the child the body of Thomas Williams was found in the Mount Pleasant ravine. When the discovery was made the corpse was yet warm and life was not quite extinct. Bruises about the head and chest showed foul play, and this theory was enforced by the actions of the almost lifeless man, who muttered a few times and then died. People who were near him when he breathed the last aver that Williams said he could identify his assailant if he could again see him. He mentioned no names, however.

The consternation that the death of Williams created is still remembered by the older residents of the West Side. "He was surely murdered," said an old-timer, as he rehearsed the case to a Tribune reporter yesterday; "Williams had his enemies and it is a crying shame that nothing was done to ferret out his assailant. But the matter was dropped." Another incident in the history of the family with the tragedy. When Williams left his home he did so on the command of his wife, who had quarreled with him. She told him to go where he had been—to a saloon—and he never returned. Left without a cent, the wife, a widow and her daughter Maggie, whose child was still living, removed from Hyde Park avenue to North Main avenue, where they opened a candy store in the old four-block house opposite to where Clarke Bros' stores now are.

This four-block house was afterward torn down and the lot is now vacant. It was while keeping this candy store that another fatal accident happened. Maggie Williams' child, a boy, was six years old when, one day, he fell into a well and was drowned.

Soon after this the girl went to Taylor to live and afterward made a trip to the west. Her mother followed her and died there. While in the west, Maggie married a man named Patrick Sheridan and six years ago while Sheridan was working in the coal mines at Streeter, Ill., he killed his hand crushed by a "fall" and his right arm was amputated below the elbow.

After this accident Sheridan and his wife became tramps. On Friday they reached Hyde Park, which Maggie had not once seen since she left for the west eighteen years ago. They had been here but a few hours when Officer Saul arrested them in the Scranton street section. In police court they were discharged. The woman is not altogether bad looking, but she shows the effects of a hard life.

HIS DIMENSIONS. In the police station Saturday morning was another prisoner with a history. He is William Lewis and he calls himself "Little Bill." His height is 48 inches, his face is bearded, his age is 45 years, his weight is 95 pounds, and one of his legs is wooden. He says he killed someone on the road on the "old country" but is "as happy as the day." Three cents in his pocket was all his wealth and he bought candy with that.

WEST SIDE WINNERS. The West Side singers who entered Saturday's contest at Shamokin came off victoriously in nearly everything they entered. Edwin Bowen, the sweet tenor soloist, won a prize of $8 in the competition for his style of vocalists. Mr. Bowen was opposed by twelve other singers. In the duet competition Philip Warren and Dave Stevens won the first prize, $10. There were six prizes. Mr. Warren also won $8 for the best singing in the bass solo competition. The chief adjudicator was C. W. Tyndal, of Glen Falls, N. Y. In giving his adjudication Mr. Tyndal said the greatest compliments to the West Side victors. Much dissatisfaction was shown over the decision of Adjudicator Edward Broom, of Canada. In the male party competition for a prize of $200. There were entered the Wilkes-Barre party, Mt. Carmel party and the Taylor-Glee club. The money was given to the Mt. Carmel organization. The West Side and Taylor people returned home yesterday morning.

FELL DOWN STEPS. Michael McGeever, a widower, living at the corner of Luzerne and Twentieth streets, fell down a flight of steps at his home at 2 o'clock yesterday morning and the injuries he sustained warranted his removal to the Lackawanna hospital. Dr. Blanchard found that several ribs had been fractured by the fall. McGeever is a middle-aged man. He was resting easily last night.

TO DEFEAT BRYAN. Gen. Chas. Tracey Doesn't Think the Third Ticket Will Hurt McKinley. Albany, Sept. 6.—National Committeeman Charles Tracey was at the Albany headquarters of the great Vermont Democrats in the DeGraaf building today. He returned from Indianapolis last night. He spoke in very enthusiastic terms of the prospects of the gold Democrats, who propose to defeat Bryan. "At Indianapolis," he said, "we received the news of the Vermont election with great pleasure, because it realized our expectation that the Democrats of the Green Mountain state would hold fast to the principles of their party. The result in Vermont belies the assertion that the farmers, irrespective of party, are for free silver coinage. The farmers of Vermont have had as hard times as any in the country, and only a short time ago the question of abandoned farms was a serious one. If the Vermont farmers believed free silver coinage would have helped them they would have voted for the Democratic candidates in the state election. The talk that no effort was made to carry Vermont to the Democratic side is entirely untrue. I hear that in Indianapolis reported that Vermont was flooded with free silver literature, bearing the frank of Senator Faulkner, the chairman of the silver congressional campaign committee. I hear that in Maine the Republican candidate for governor is weak, and the Democrats have a strong man up. Mark my words, the vote in Maine will be as significant as that in Vermont. I do not think our third ticket in November will interfere with McKinley's vote in either Vermont or Maine. The Vermont Democrats who stayed at home and others who voted for Candidate Jackson, who will vote for Palmer and Buckner in November. The purpose of our Indianapolis convention in adopting a platform and naming candidates was to preserve the principles of the party. My personal opinion is that McKinley will be aided and not injured by it. The Republicans are standing just where they have been, for protection and sound money, and it will be difficult to take their votes over to the Bryan camp. On the other hand, many Democrats will see in the Indianapolis platform and candidates what they have heretofore looked upon as sound Democracy, and will find it easy to resist following Mr. Bryan in the abandonment of the old party platform. Democrats could never go all the way over to McKinley, but will come half way to vote for our candidates and the preservation of the faith."

General Tracey said he learned at Indianapolis from various New York and other delegates that the Democratic defection is steadily growing. Tammany is divided, and any plurality McKinley may get in this state would not surprise him, even if it went over 200,000 or 300,000. Indiana was reported as safe for McKinley, by at least 200,000, and Illinois was claimed by some sound money delegates for the Republicans by 50,000 plurality. Others thought the vote would be close. Iowa was now deemed safe for McKinley. The hardest fight would be in Minnesota and Illinois. It was a matter of continual surprise. General Tracey said that the delegates at Indianapolis who Senator Hill did not come out against Bryan and silver. After his speech at Chicago in opposition to the platform, they could not understand his hesitation.

VICTIM OF HIS OWN DEVICE. John Clement Shot by a Gun Trap Set to Shoot Boys in the Leg. New York, Sept. 6.—Mr. John Clement, superintendent of the brass works of the Manhattan Elevated road of this city, lives at 85 Galathea avenue, Astoria. The grounds about his home are devoted to grape raising, and there are few finer arbors in the county. Boys stole in at night, robbed the vines, and broke the arbors down. Mr. Clement requested that a gun trap be set. Mr. Clement constructed a gun trap. It was hidden in the grass. A person stepping on a small board would cause the weapon to explode. It was aimed in such a manner as to hit its victim in the calf of the leg. Friday evening Mr. Clement strolled out among his arbors to enjoy his after-dinner cigar. He sat in a summer house for an hour or more then he started for the house. As he passed under the arbors he put his foot on the board. There was an explosion, and Mr. Clement lay on the ground. The bullet had entered the calf of the leg and struck an artery. Mr. Clement called once or twice, but nobody in the neighborhood heard him. He tore a twig from a grape vine and bound it tightly to his leg, just above the wound, stopping the flow of blood. Again Mr. Clement called, and this time his cries were heard. Servants bore him into the house. Dr. Charles H. McDonald, of the St. John's Hospital, was called, and the bullet. Mr. Clement is in no danger.

BUNCOED A BICYCLE CLERK. A Newark Girl's Glib Talk Convinced Him, but She is Arrested. New York, Sept. 6.—A nineteen-year-old girl, who is said to be a professional bicycle thief, was a prisoner in Police Justice Potts's court in Jersey City yesterday morning. She gave her name and address as Rose Wagoner, 206 Ogden street, Newark. On Wednesday last the young woman called at Smith & Romaine's bicycle store, at Erie and Fourth streets, Jersey City, and looked over the stock. She told the clerk that she wanted to buy a good wheel. From the girl way in which she described and discussed the merits of the various wheels and other appointments of a bicycle, the clerk was convinced that she was an expert. When she suggested to the clerk that she would like to take one of the wheels out and try it before making a purchase, the clerk did not ask for the customary deposit. She told the clerk that her name was Wagoner, and that she lived on Henderson street. The clerk began to get a little bit worried when several hours had passed and "Miss Underhill" had not returned. He sent around to the address in Henderson street and learned that no such person lived there. The police were notified and the young woman was arrested in Newark. She was identified yesterday by the clerk and was committed to await the action of the Grand jury.

SPAIN'S OTHER WAR. Her Gunboats Make an Attack Upon the Philippine Islanders. Madrid, Sept. 6.—Official advices from Manila say that the Spanish gunboats made an attack upon the insurgents who were entrenched upon the isthmus of Cavite and the peninsula, while a column of troops pursued them upon land. The insurgents were routed and many of them were taken prisoners by the Spanish. Four prisoners were shot and 200 transported to the Marianne Islands. Pillsbury Flour mills have a capacity of 17,000 barrels a day.

MARKETS AND STOCKS. Wall Street Review. New York, Sept. 5.—Stocks at the opening were generally a shade lower on the balance of London, in response to our strong closing of yesterday and on rumors that the bank statement would make a very unfavorable showing. The weakness did not last long, however, and in the closing hour the market was strong with an advancing tendency. Local bears held off for a time when the bank statement referred to was better than generally expected, the loss in surplus reserve being only $607,650. In the upward movement near the close the Grangers, Manhattan and Great Eastern were most prominent. The improvement in prices in the late trading was equal to 1/4 to 3/4 per cent., with Great Eastern the special feature with sales up to 2 1/2. Speculation closed firm with the active stocks generally 1/4 to 1 per cent. above Friday's final figures. Total sales were 100,141 shares.
