DAUGHTER OF PAUL ROMAINE.

Miss Margaret Fuller made her first appearance before a Scranton audience last evening on the Academy of Music stage in an emotional drama entitled "The Daughter of Paul Romaine." The play is an adaptation from the German of Adolf Wilbrandt by William C. Hudson.

The story, told in four acts, originates in the domestic infelicities of Paul Romaine and his wife who is known to the world as Mme. Lillian Le Grand and famous on the stage as a singer.

Driven to desperation by home troubles, Paul Romaine becomes a drunkard, beggar and later in his career a burglar. The owner of the house which Paul attempts to burglarize is incidentally killed in the scuffle. Sentence for life is the penalty the burglar and supposed murderer pays, but after twenty-four years confinement he is pardoned by the acting governor. Two daughters have grown into womanhood during that time, without any parental training, for the mother's professional domestic infelicity is their inheritance also.

One of them, Eleanor Bruce, is married but dies after the birth of a son. The other out of affection for the child assumes the name of her sister and remains behind in the world as the mother of the boy, Little Victor. Eleanor, who acts in the capacity of private secretary to Lloyd Randolph, a wealthy silk mill owner, together with the child, are befriended during many years by her employer. This friendship ripens into true love which, however, does not run smooth owing to the partial disclosure of the true state of affairs by Eleanor to her lover, Paul Romaine, the father and Mme. Lillian Le Grand, the mother, by a coincidence, are both discovered at some of Eleanor at the same time seeking a glimpse of their daughter and grandchild. Paul, being known as a criminal, is suspected of attempt at burglary and is committed to jail pending a hearing.

The last act consists of a trial before a magistrate. All of the characters in the play are witnesses and the true identity of all the parties and their relationship is revealed, despite the strenuous efforts of Paul Romaine in denying that he is the father of Eleanor, his motive for which was to save his daughter from shame and disgrace that would attach on account of his past career. This revelation results in reconciliation.

Miss Fuller created a very favorable impression in her acting throughout the entire play and of her chief support, Henry Jewett, enough is said, when it is said that he is the right man in the right place. The other parts were quite creditably occupied. Mary Ellen Ballou, Grace Sheridan and George Pauncefoot deserving special recognition. Only a fair sized audience witnessed the performance.

SCHOLZ IS STILL ALIVE.

No Solution of the Mysterious Shooting—Another Heard the Screams.

There is no material change in the condition of Frank Scholz, who was shot in such a mysterious manner on North Washington avenue, Tuesday night, when he was hit by a bullet from the cause of the shooting or who did it.

Henry Dunning, who lives in the neighborhood of the point which the affair occurred, says that while preparing for bed about 11 o'clock, Tuesday night, he heard two pistol shots, a second came and then the exclamation "You have shot my man."

The object of the sentence he did not catch. He did not investigate.

Celia Clark, the young woman who was with Scholz, was released from jail yesterday. An application for her freedom was made by Attorney T. P. Duffy, who has a writ out for Scholz's arrest. He said she should not be detained as a witness. Judge Archibald thought there was no reason for keeping her in jail in default of $800 bail, and set her free on her own recognizance.

RESPECTED THE BADGE.

Weir Would Not Prosecute a Grand Army Man.

Albert Weir, a breaker boy, living in Wright's court, while on his way to secure some ice for his sick mother, was knocked down and painfully wounded by being hit in the head with a coal scuttle hurled at him by a neighbor, Isaac Seeds.

John Weir, father of the boy, had Seeds arrested on a warrant from Alderman Millar's office. When arraigned Seeds explained that he threw the scuttle at a crowd of lads who had been annoying him and he did not intend to hit young Weir, who he says, was not one of his annoyances.

When Mr. Weir heard this statement and saw that Seeds wore a Grand Army badge he withdrew the prosecution and Alderman Millar agreed to cancel the costs.

Williams' College Notes.

Prof. McClusky experienced a second great grief on Thursday by the death of his only remaining child, a little son, and school adjourned for the day in consequence, the faculty and students joining in appropriate resolutions of condolence and in sending a beautiful floral tribute to the bereaved parents.

The Williams' Literary society met last evening under most favorable auspices. Much good was accomplished by the debates last year and more is promised for the future.

Another student came from New York this week and still another enters next Monday.

The attendance is much larger than last year, 129 now in normal English work.

Last year the short hand department opened with 30 students; this year it opened with 71 and has now 102 in daily attendance. We doubt if any other two business colleges in Pennsylvania can today show as many short hand students in daily attendance.

Many are booked to enter this month and a crowd is certain in every department. Our faculty of 12 talented teachers is none too large.

SONS OF AMERICA HOLD A CELEBRATION

Principally to Honor State President A. J. Colborn, jr.

HE DELIVERS A SPLENDID SPEECH

The Exercises Took Place at Music Hall and the Eleventh Anniversary of Camp 242 of This City Was Also Celebrated—Henry T. Koehler Was Chairman—Address of F. L. Murphy, of Philadelphia.

Patriotic Sons of America of the city and many members of camps in various parts of the county gathered at Music Hall last night to honor their new state president, A. J. Colborn, jr., recently elected at Altoona, and to rejoice with him in his success and show how proud they were of his victory. They tendered him an ovation that could not be surpassed; and he in return made a speech that electrified them and cheered them, when he concluded, to cheer and stamp and shout and clap with all their energy for fully five minutes.

The hall was filled with members of the order. The stage was decorated with a banner of George Washington, enshrouded with an American flag, and flags and bunting were on all sides. Henry T. Koehler was chairman and by his side were State President Colborn, ex-State Vice-President George B. Anderson, of Wilkes-Barre; George E. Murphy, of Philadelphia, and Joseph E. Baumeister, of this city. The members of Company A, Patriotic Guards, of the South Side, in full uniform acted as escort to the party on the stage. Bauer's band had seats in the first row and furnished delightful music for the occasion.

OPENING THE EXERCISES.

Chairman Koehler made the introductory address. He said the members were gathered for a two-fold purpose, the celebration of the eleventh anniversary of Camp 242, of this city, and to celebrate the election of President Colborn. He introduced Mr. Baumeister to read a review of the history of the camp. The latter presented an interesting account of its progress. Eleven years ago the order was organized with twenty-two charter members; today it has 165 members and a substantial treasury. It is a part of the Sons of America, of which there are 70 camps in Northeastern Pennsylvania with a membership of 250. Today there are 70 camps and 4,000 members.

The orchestra played "America" and everybody joined in the chorus. Mr. Murphy was introduced and was very entertaining. He possesses a ready and graceful style of eloquence. Meetings like this, he said, are occasions of joy and gladness, but sometimes it can be one of sadness. He related pleasant experiences of his first meetings with Scranton members.

A PERTINENT QUESTION.

"What have you done to demonstrate that you have any title to the name Sons of America?" is a question that was once asked of Mr. Murphy, and he considered it a pertinent question. The answer he gave was this: "If the days before the Revolution are remembered, we can look at the Junior Order of Sons of America. They were in existence long before there appeared to be any necessity for equipping men for military service. But when the war broke out the Juniors rallied to the front and when the smoke of battle cleared away 40 per cent of those who received medical aid for bravery were Juniors."

"The Star Spangled Banner" was played by the orchestra and the chorus was joined in by the members. President Colborn was introduced and thanked his brethren for the order for the kindly reception and for the honor they had shown him. He did not regard it as a personal mark of credit, but looked at it as the success of the united effort of the delegates of North-eastern Pennsylvania, and parts of Philadelphia, with Lancaster and Schuylkill and he as the one deemed worthy by them to be chosen for the honor.

The receptions tendered to an old captain when he returns from the war do not testify that he deserves all the credit. The private, without whom he would be nothing, are deserving of the praise, yet they turn to their old captain and bless him because they followed him.

ASKED FOR UNITED SUPPORT.

President Colborn asked for the united support of the camp and every member in the county and in the state. He feels that he is entitled to it for the good of the order. The members should send their cars to all disensions and allurements, and they must co-operate together with zeal and courage.

In times of peace what is the use of joining the Sons of America? men will ask. It was in the days of the most peaceful history of the world that the seeds of discord and dissension have sprung up. In this country the past is secure with the memory of the sacrifices of heroism and patriotism that have fringed of shadow and dark clouds hovering over the future and this great nation is not great by being measured by its territorial boundaries, its navies, its commerce and wealth. Rome was insignificant in area; so
