A NARROW ESCAPE.

Brakeman John W. Smith Badly Iujured on the Railroad.

John W. Smith, a brakeman on the Delaware and Hudson railroad, was Delaware and Hudson railroad, was been injured yesterday morning and removed to his hone at No. 4 on the gravity road. When the train was near the Marvine shaft at Scranton, in jumping from the coulae he found nimself directly in trent of a north bound train, His escape from instant death was almost miraculous. He fell with great force between the rails, but the couring rolled him forward until the the engine rolled him forward until the train was stopped. Dr. F. E. Jenkins made a careful examination of the injured man and it is hoped that he is not injured internally though suffering from a dislocated shoulder and many outs and bruises over the whole body.
