M'KENNA-JORDAN WEDDINGS.

An Important Wedding at St. Rose's Church.

Yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock in St. Rose church occurred the wedding of Miss Marie G. Jordan, daughter of Harry Jordan of the West Side, and P. F. McKenna, of Gordon avenue. The bride wore a dress of white silk and carried a bouquet of white roses, and her sister, Miss Bridget Jordan, who attended her, wore white organdie over yellow silk, and carried yellow roses. W. J. McDonough acted as best man. After the ceremony the party drove to the home of the bride's parents where a wedding supper was served. Only the immediate friends and relatives attended.

After an evening of pleasure Mr. and Mrs. McKenna took the Delaware and Hudson train for a bridal trip including Buffalo, and Niagara. They will return there will commence house-keeping. Among the out of town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. T. V. Cummings, Misses Nellie and Joseph Cummings, and Charles Cummings, of Scranton.

REPUBLICAN RALLY.

Speeches by Messrs. Patterson and Zimmerman.

An enthusiastic meeting was held on Monday evening in Assembly hall under the auspices of the Republican club. A large number of people were present and all the seats were occupied, when H. O. Watson, president of the club called the meeting to order. He delivered a brief address and then introduced R. H. Patterson, who spoke for more than an hour, presenting forcible arguments and showing the importance of a sound currency, especially for the working man. Zimmerman, of Scranton, next reviewed the situation, citing Harrison's administration and compared it with the present condition. The speakers were well received, and much enthusiasm was manifested.

Presentation to Mr. and Mrs. Gummer.

P. E. Gummer, of the Anthracite Hotel, was surprised Monday evening by a summons to the reception room of the hotel where the male employees of the hotel were assembled. Charles Jansen Sadler, chef at the hotel then stepped forward and in an appropriate address presented an elegant and costly smoking set finely engraved with Mr. Gummer's monogram on each piece. Mr. Gummer responded, returning his thanks to those who had honored him so unexpectedly. He expressed his uniform kindness and fidelity while in his employ and that the gift would be ever cherished in memory of the pleasant relations which had existed between them. Mrs. Gummer also received from the female employees of the house a handsome silver jardiniere as a memento.

Mrs. Brown Returns.

Mrs. Walter Hughes Brown returned from her European trip some time ago where she visited Havre, Paris, Cologne, Berlin, London and other cities in Europe in order to observe and study methods of teaching in the schools of art and elocution. Having spent some weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Reese Hughes, of Salem avenue, she will now attend the New England conservatory at Boston for further training in elocution and music. Mrs. Brown will resume her former position as chorister of the Presbyterian church at One Hundred and Fourteenth street, New York. Her talents and energy promise to afford her a prominent position in her profession.

A Delightful Bicycle Trip.

A party consisting of S. F. Carpenter, G. M. Patterson, John G. Reese, Thomas Levlson, George Norris, H. J. Elbrecht, and Andrew Mitchell enjoyed a trip on their wheels Saturday and Sunday to Port Jervis, passing over the too-path to Dingman's Ferry. The distance of 42 miles was made in four hours and was a delightful ride. Leaving Port Jervis on Sunday morning the run of sixteen miles to Dingman's Ferry was taken before breakfast. A number of the party returned to Waymart by way of Narrowsburg and a delightful time was had by all.

Miss Alice Crane Passes Away.

Miss Alice Crane, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Crane, died yesterday after an illness of fifteen days. Although every effort was made to overcome the disease, typhoid fever had taken strong hold of her system and could not be subdued. She was 18 years of age, of sweet disposition and beloved by all who knew her.

LOVE AFFAIRS OF MEN OF RENOWN.

Talleyrand never was in love but once, and that was when he was about 16 years old. When Napoleon ordered him to marry and picked out a wife for him, he pleaded this youthful attachment, which was immediately scoffed at by the great match-maker as a piece of nonsense.

Haslett fell in love with the daughter of his landlady, a young woman who helped the servants in the work of the boarding house and seems to have been a little too familiar with the boarders. The letters of the charming essayist to this young person verge on the borderland of idiosyncy.

Mozart fell in love with Constance Weber, a young lady whose chief characteristic seems to have been her indiscretion. In one of his letters to her he objects to her permitting a gentleman of her acquaintance to pull off her shoe. He solemnly remarks: "No young lady of proper sensibilities would have permitted such a thing."

Israel Putnam, the sturdy American hero, fell in love with a young girl and a festival in which the paring of apples for drying was the leading employment. He tossed one long peeling over her shoulder, and she, mistaking it for a fortune-telling, then common, and it fell in the shape of the initial of her name.

Herod the Great loved Marianne, his wife, so devotedly that when he was summoned to Rome by Augustus to answer certain charges made against him, he left her in care of three trusted servants, with orders that if he himself were put to death by Augustus she was to be immediately killed.

Dante's "Divina Commedia" was a monument to Beatrice. He fell in love with her when she was 8 and he was 23 years old. She afterwards married another man, and he another woman, but these little incidents do not seem to have cut any figure, though the course of true love, in his case, ran no more smoothly than it is said to do in most others.

Gibbon fell in love with Miss Churchard; his father told him to forget her, which he promptly did. When he grew old, he became enamored of Lady Elizabeth Foster, and falling on his knees before her in her garden, declared his passion. Unfortunately, the poor historian was so fat, he could not rise, and she was forced to call a footman to help him to his feet.

William the Conqueror fell in love with Matilda, the daughter of a French nobleman. She refused to marry him, so he lay in wait and one day when she was riding, pulled her off her horse and beat her with a stick. The act won her admiration, she immediately concluded that he must be a very brave knight to give her a thrashing in sight of her father's castle, and a few months later married him.

When Marshal Bethlor was in Egypt with Napoleon he was insanely in love with a young woman named Cleopatra. So many absurdities that among his intimates he was known as Chef de la Faction des Amoureux. Among his other follies was the erection of a tent, next to his, in which he converted it into a temple to the Madam, erected an altar to her picture, before which he burned incense every morning.

When Prince Augustus Frederick of England was idiotically in love with Miss Gunn, he wrote to her: "If you do not marry me at once I shall die." Probably to prevent his dying before his time she permitted the ceremony to be performed with the lady's kind assistance, an English clergyman journeying in Italy. Not long after the marriage was annulled by act of parliament with the full consent of Prince Augustus Frederick, who survived for a considerable time.

When Leigh Hunt was in love, he says himself that he got up at 5 o'clock in the morning, went about sullen and morose, until 11 o'clock at night, when he cursed his stars and went to bed, all because of a little girl whom nobody knew and who was not particularly bright or even intelligent. He wrote to his sweetheart little, pedantic letters, in which he made a constant mention of spelling, and desired that she should be careful in the use of capital letters and marks of punctuation.

Cruden, who prepared the Bible Concordance, fell in love with a young woman named Elizabeth Abney, who did not reciprocate, although he wrote her every day a long letter setting forth the state of his heart. She left London and went to Bath, whereupon he had a handbill printed and circulated about the streets, requesting all men to pray for the safety of her journey. When she came back he struck off another, requesting the people of the parish to give thanks for her preservation during her absence and her return without accident.

When Marshal Saxe was besieging Blenheim, in 1704, he divided his time between sleep, operations and Mlle. Chantilly, the prima of an opera company that he kept in his camp for amusement during leisure hours. She ran off one dark stormy night with the leader of the orchestra, and at the same time a flood in the Rhine; Mies broke the bridges and divided the army. His officers came to him with the intelligence and found him in tears; they were panic-stricken, supposing the disaster to be very serious, but could not restrain the laughter when they found he was crying at Mlle. Chantilly.

Don Louis Bazan, a brave knight of the court of Charles V., fell in love with a lady of the Emperor's train, and, in full belief that he had made a strong impression on her affections, swore, before the archbishop of Madrid, that he would not cut his hair or beard until she would marry him, not doubting for a moment that the ceremony would take place in a few days. She refused him, whereupon, in great anxiety, he consulted the archbishop in regard to his vow, and was assured by that functionary that he was in danger of the worm that dieth not if he did not keep it. He kept it, and thenceforth was known as "The Knight of the Hairy Phiz."

Thomas Day, the author of "Sandford and Merton," undertook to raise a wife to suit himself, but he found the young woman untractable. When he tried to school her to fortitude by dropping melted sealing wax on her arm, she screamed; when he tested her by telling her that he was going to kill the churchwarden that night she sent word to a sergeant of constabulary, who came to inquire into the matter. Worst of all she finally deserted him, and he was obliged to follow her to the neighborhood, whereupon he straightaway fell in love with a young woman, who did him an evil turn by marrying him and making him miserable.

Nervous

People find just the help they so much need, in Hood's Sarsaparilla. It furnishes the desired strength by purifying, vitalizing and enriching the blood, and thus builds up the nerves, tones the stomach and regulates the whole system. Head this:

"I want to praise Hood's Sarsaparilla. My health ran down, and I had the grip. After that, my heart and nervous system were badly affected, so that I could not do my own work. Our physician gave me some help, but did not cure. I decided to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. Soon I could do all my own housework. I have taken

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Hood's Pills with Hood's Sarsaparilla, and they have done me much good. I will not be without them. I have taken 13 bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and through the blessing of God, it has cured me. I worked as hard as ever the past summer, and I am thankful to say I am well. Hood's Pills when taken with Hood's Sarsaparilla help very much." Mrs. M. M. MESSING, Freehold, Penn.

WOMAN'S INFLUENCE.

The influence of women upon the civilization of the world, could never be measured.

Because of her, thrones have been established and destroyed. The flash of her eye, the touch of her hand, and we have the marvellous power of women, glorious in the possession of perfect physical health.

Lydia E. Pinkham, by her wonderful discovery of the "Vegetable Compound," has done much to place this great power in the hands of women.

She has lifted thousands and thousands out of the misery brought by displacement of the womb, and all the evils that follow diseases of the uterus.

The "Vegetable Compound" restores natural cheerfulness, cures backache, strengthens the muscles, restores the womb to its normal condition, and you are changed from a physical wreck to the joy of your home and friends.

By the way—the leading druggists tell us that the demand for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is simply beyond their power of understanding and what is best of all, it does the work and cures where the best physicians utterly fail.
