THE ORIGINAL STAR CHAMBER

Something About This Famous Scheme of Oppression.

From the Philadelphia Times.

When the Earl of Richmond had defeated Richard III. at Bosworth, and had been crowned King as Henry VII., he found the times in so troubled a state that men whose rights were infringed upon or denied them dared not apply for justice to the ordinary courts. The unblushing manner in which bribes and threats were resorted to by those that had influence over the proceedings of these courts denied to them the security of a juror's oath.

To reach a mischief that had grown so intolerable, Henry, feeling himself strong enough with his second parliament, created a court, made up of the highest officers of the kingdom, embracing, theoretically, the king himself, who was considered the author of all justice, to which was confided unlimited power and discretion over a large undefined class of offenses, many of which were of a political character, without the restraint of a jury, and subject to no revision by appeal. This was afterward known as the court of the star chamber, so called because the ceiling of the room in which it met was studded with stars, or because in this apartment, prior to the time of Edward I., the contracts of the Jews, called "starrs," were deposited in boxes or chests.

This scheme had good results at first. Wealthy landowners who had oppressed their neighbors with impunity were brought before this court, where neither fear nor favor could avail, and tried for their offences. The greatest merit of the court was that it was not dependent on a jury, for juries were unable or unwilling to render a verdict in keeping with their consciences.

One said "a court thus constituted, with powers so broad and a discretion unlimited by prescribed rules, though called into existence for wise and salutary purposes, was in the end like invoking the spirit of mischief without a corresponding power in reserve to lay it or check its excesses, if inclined to abuse its authority."

Instead of losing power as the necessity for its existence passed away, it drew to itself new elements of strength and enlarged the extent of its jurisdiction. It became, after successive administrations, under the hands of ambitious leaders and unscrupulous prelates, such as flourished in the times of Henry VIII., Elizabeth, and the two Stuarts, a most potent engine of despotic rule and intolerance. Torture, intimidation, and other devices were used to compel self-incrimination.

Charles I., through the star chamber, filled his coffers. During his reign such enormous fines were imposed for trivial offences that the audience gathered about the court room at 3 o'clock in the morning to secure seats to hear the proceedings. The discretionary power of the court in the way of punishment made it a means of cruel injustice in the hands of bad men, instances of which disgrace the history of its administration during the reigns of James I. and Charles I.

Sir Anthony Roger was fined £4,000 for violating a law made in the time of Henry VII. for converting arable land into pasture. Richard Grenville said of the Earl of Suffolk, with whom he had some difficulty, that he was "a base lord." He was fined £8,000 for such a slander.

One of the most remarkable cases was that of Bishop Williams, who had been lord keeper of the seal, a popular prelate, and a man of learing and spirit and at one time a special favorite of James's. While enjoying his patronage he exerted his influence in behalf of Laud, afterward Archbishop, who owed his first promotion to his good offices. Some disagreement arose between them. Nothing would satisfy Laud but the ruin of the man who had befriended him.

On some slight pretext the Bishop was brought before the star chamber and fined £10,000, committed to the Tower during the King's pleasure, and suspended from office. His furniture and books were levied upon to pay the fine. Among some refuse papers were found some letters from Obaldiston, a schoolmaster, directed to the Bishop. In these letters the writer spoke of a "little great man," and in one place of a "little urchin." As Laud was small of stature, it was conjectured that these terms referred to him. They were both tried, one for receiving such scandalous letters, and the other for writing them. Williams paid a fine of £8,000, and Obaldiston £5,000, and had his ears nailed to the pillory in sight of his own school.

Masfix," a huge volume of music, dancing, Prynne, a barrister at law of Lincoln's Inn, a Puritan of the strictest sect, published his famous "Histriomastix, public festivals, Christmas sports, bonfires, and May poles. For this alleged libellous volume he was arraigned before the star chamber. The trial occupied three days, and the fourth was consumed in pronouncing sentence against him.

Mr. Prynne, in his general sweep for his historical illustration of the mischief of frequenting plays, referred to Nero, and spoke of Flavius and others who conspired against him for his bad example upon the magistrates and the people. The Chief Justice from this inferred that the author intended to instigate the people to murder the King, and Prynne was deprived of his right to practice as a barrister, condemned to stand in the pillory at Westminster and Cheapside, to lose his ears, one at each of these places, to pay a fine of $5,000, and to be imprisoned for life.

There was hardly a man in the realm who had not personal experience of the harshness and greediness of the star chamber. It became odious and not without reason. It was abolished in 1641, as one of the acts of concession made by Charles I. to the demands of an indignant nation. Prynne and his fellow martyrs were called from prison. They entered London in triumph amid the shouts of the multitude, who threw laurels in their path.

It Was Not Lost.

Mrs. Vansock (indignantly)—"Mrs. O'Lone, the color all came out of my new table cover on account of the horrible washing fluid you use."

Mrs. O'Lone (pacifyingly)—"Niver, moind, mum. Shure it all wint into the other clothes, mum."—Judge.

ELECTRICITY IS KING.

DR. GREEN'S ELECTRO-THERAPEUTIC INSTITUTE

607, 608 AND 609 MEARS BUILDING

Corner Washington Avenue and Spruce Street, Scranton, Penna.

CORNELIUS VANDERBILT experienced a paralytic stroke some time ago and four of New York's greatest physicians attended him.

The treatment given Mr. Vanderbilt and from which he is regaining health was electrical. Two Galvanic and Faradic machines were taken to Mr. Vanderbilt's home, and in a short time he was able to go to Newport, R. I.

A few years ago such a stroke would have been considered fatal but electricity conquered, as it is doing in hundreds of cases.

Not long since a prominent physician of St. Louis performed an operation before the Medical society of that city restoring the speech of a man who had not spoken for three years. Some time ago it was thought that Nat Goodwin, the famous comedian, would be compelled to undergo an operation, but Professor Morton, of New York, treated him electrically and there has been no necessity of an operation.

John B. Beatty, of Easton, Pa., had what was called an incurable case of eczema. Dr. Green cured him in four weeks. The whole world is acquainted with the discovery of the Roentgen X Rays and the use to which they are put.

If you want to see every electrical appliance known to the medical profession call at Dr. Green's Electrical Institute. The best of references, no charge for consultation, an Institute equipped with the latest achievements of Morton, Edison, Ranney, Rockwell, McBride, McIntosh and others. Electro Static Machines, Galvanic, Faradic, Sinusoidal (Magnetic), Galvano Vauteries, and electrodes of every description.

We have the finest X-Ray apparatus made.

With electricity as a basis of treatment we are successful in cases of Rheumatism, Gout, Paralysis, Eczema, Tumors, Skin Troubles, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, the Wasting of Muscles, Poor Circulation, and all Nervous Diseases for which electricity is doing so much of late.

The blood clot causing Apoplexy and Paralysis can be dissolved and carried away by proper application of Galvanism and Faradism.

Cures of Catarrh are being made by the inhalation of ozone from the Electro-static machine.

We might mention hundreds of troubles which are amenable to electric treatment, but space will not permit.

Dr. Green treats all cases amenable to electrical treatment, is a graduate and experienced practitioner of medicine, has the best of references, and will charge nothing for consultation.

Those who cannot call should write for information.
