BIRTHDAY SURPRISE.

Presentation of Gold Watch and Chain to Saperintendent Whyte.

Last Saturday was Superintendent John W. Whyte's forty-sixth birthday. A number of the employes of the Northwest colliery, appreciating the pleasant relations existing between them, took that occasion to show their esteem. Forming a procession, they surprised him by a visit to his house in the eyening and then having offered congratulations Superintendent James G. Shepherd, of Scranton, in a short, approprilations Superintendent James G. Shepherd, of Scranton, in a short, appropriate address, presented him a handsome gold watch and chain. Mr. Whyte, though taken by surprise, was equal to the occasion, and responded in well chosen words, expressing his value of their good will. The evening was passed in a social manner and a muscied programme was rendered by a passed in a social manner and a mus-ical programme was rendered by a number of the guests. A sumptuous repast had been prepared by Mrs. Whyte and her able assistants and so an occasion long to be remembered was celebrated by speeches, vocal and in-strumental music and general festivity.

WHOLESOME MOTHERHOOD

A Chapter of a dvice to Mothers and Daughters That's Worth Studying.

From the Home Queen.

From the Home Queen.

I asked a sweet little girl of four years what she was going to be when she grew up. She answered, looking admiringly towards her own mamma, "just a mother." Half unconsciously the little maid expressed a whole volume in those few words; and yet how few women realize what they are taking upon themselves when they undertake to become a wife and mother.

No one has a right to do this without special preparation and knowledge. A sincere and careful study of the duties and responsibilities one is about to assume should precede the assumption of these relationships. It is due to the man one is to marry—it is due to the child that is to be born, that the wife and the mother should avail herself of every legitimate source of wisdom and of strength. friends in Wyalusing and Iona, Michi Five hunderd Scranton silverites will ome to this city tonight on a special Delaware and Hudson train.

Some one inquired of the late Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, "When should the culture of the child begin?" The great scientist and philosopher answered, "A hundred years before it is born." Unfortunately for our offspring, we cannot turn back the wheel of time to that extent; but we can ourselves begin so the right story may be told a hundred years hence.

A. C. Lindsay, of the Honesdale National Bank and wife, will spend the present week in New York city.

Preparations are being made to move the Honesdale postoffice from its present location in the Foster building to the Independent building on Front street. It is a perpetual marvel that women without this special preparation for their profession have done so well; but their profession have done so well; but how much better they might have done if they only had known more to begin with. As it is, they learn the art of housekeeping at the husband's expense, often at the expense of both his pocket and his stomach. They learn the duties of maternity at the expense of their own health; and often, too, of their own life. They learn to rear their children at the cost of a bitter experience, and at the loss of a large proportion of them, many of them dying in early infancy. Y., yesterday.

Fortunately she has never succeeded in catching a husband, else he would soon be surfeited in sweets; but what an example she makes of herself to the young ladies of her class. According to their respect for her, they despise housework.

She teaches them accomplishments, appearances, drawing, dancing, dressing, and conversation. Every year she graduates a set of pale-faced, small-waisted, insipid young creatures whore

Far better would it be for their future husbands and for the human race if they were never begun. All these things have their lawful place; but if a girl's education must be confined either to this or to some good cooking school, we would certainly prefer the latter.

Of all kinds of trades it is expected that one will serve some sort of apprenticeship, all, save these, the most important of all—those of wife, and mother, and the household queen. The merest chit of a girl has no misgivings about her qualifications for such a position the moment it is offered to her. What wonder that disaster, divorce or death often follow the bridal hour!

A young clergyman, fascinated by the radiance of youth and beauty, married a woman of eighteen summers. When he afterwards found she did not know how to wind a clock, nor scarcely how to tell the time of day by it, he was so disgusted that their wedding ended in tragedy and a life-long mis—

Yet, alas! how closely marriage and invalidism have become associated in the public mind.

In the first place the girl should study her own organization and her special constitution. Anatomy and physiology should become familiar sciences. She will then know better than to compress her chest with consert and compress will then know better than to compress her chest with corsets; she will know better than to decrease her breathing capacity, and to reduce the power of the thoracic muscles. If you confine any part of it so it cannot perform its function, that part becomes weak and comparatively useless.

PHYSICAL FOLLIES. PHYSICAL FOLLIES.

As if this were not enough, the foolish and misguided woman puts her pretty feet on high heels, and so produces further displacement and then disease, prolonged suffering, and often death. In this way her offspring are robbed, at the very outset, of their vitality, and cheated out of their birthright to health and strength.

Surely the mother who would knowingly do this is neither wise nor conscientious, and cannot be healthful herself either mentally, morally, or physically.

The trouble is they do not know

The trouble is they do not know. Myriads of young girls on the very threshold of womanhood are standing with shattered systems, who, if they knew and could explain the cause, would say, "My mother never told me." Between the parent and the growing youth or maiden there should be the most perfect confidence and freedom of conversation on the most sacred and most intimate laws of life and hygiene. The mother who cannot intuitively The mother who cannot intuitively understand even the temptations of her son has no right to have a son. The woman who cannot so order her own life, and so prescribe anti-natal conditions as to reduce temptations to a minimum and bring assistance to temptations to its maximum, has no right to be a mother.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

Things worth knowing.

To Preserve Sponge.—The best method of treating sponges in order to preserve them is to wash them every week in salt and water.

For Making Hands Soft.—Mix honey, olive oil and almond meal in equal quantities; use when washing; wear gloves os much as possible.

Cure for Corns.—One teaspoonful of tar, one of coarse brown sugar and one of saltpetre, the whole to be warmed together; spread the mixture on kid or soft leather the size of the corns, and in two days they will be drawn out.

To Cure a Nervous Headache.—We are told that walking a short distance backwards effects an immediate cure. It is so simple that one has only to wait the opportunity to try it. It is well to be sure that your way is clear before trying it.

Leather chairs may be cleaned with warm water, a little vinegar, and a quite clean sponge; dry with a soft wash-leather, whisk the whites of three eggs with three teaspoonsfuls of turpentine, rub into the leather with a small piece of soft flannel; rub off with clean linen rags.

Filter for Cistern Water.—Perforate the bottom of a wooden box with a number of small holes; place inside a piece of flannel, cover with coarsely powdered charcial, over this coarse river sand, and on this small pieces of sandstone. The water passing through will be thoroughly filtered.

To Remove Grease from Carpets.—Equal quantities of fuller's earth and magnesia should be mixed into a paste with boiling water; put it while hot thickly over the grease and leave it on for several hours, when in all probability it will have absorbed the grease; then brush it off with a hard brush.

Cement for Joining Wood.—A very superior cement for joining wood may be made by soaking isinglass or gelatine in water until it swells; the water should then be drained off, and spirit poured on it, and the vessel placed in a pan of hot water until the isinglass is dissolved. This cement must then be kept in a dry place. If they are washed in hot water it cracks their glazed surface, making them porous and unfit for use,

"Houston," with the pronounciation given to that name in these parts. Balley looked at a lamp post.

"You mean 'Hooston,'" said Balley, don't you? The conductor without looking at him said: "I know my business."

"If part of your business is to call out the streets properly," said Balley quietly, "then you don't know it. The street we just passed is not called 'Howston," as you gave it, but 'Hooston," for General Sam Houston, the liberator of Texas. If you even went to Texas and talked about Sam 'Howstont,' you'd be lucky to escape lynching."

"If I went to Texas," said the conductor, who was born on Sixth avenue, and who never was farther away from the city than Coney Island, "I'd deserve anything they gave me." Balley said nothing, for he did not know the answer to this discourteous suggestion.
