Special to the Scranton Tribune.

Susquehanna, Oct. 13.—An ice cave has been discovered by hunters between Susquehanna and Windsor, near the dividing line between New York and Pennsylvania, about six miles from this borough. The party started out from Binghamton early in the morning on a cross-causity trin. As they were from Binghamton early in the morning on a cross-county trio. As they were passing through a rayine a drenching shower came up. While seaching for a cleft in the rock large enough to afford shelter, one of the men pushed aside a quantity of brush and disclosed a large, irregular hole that evidently led to a cave. The party was obliged the enter on their hands and knees, but soon found themselves in a rough the enter on their hands and knees, but soon found themselves in a rough hewn space that had evidently been formed by a volcanic eruption. The cave was densely dark, the only light being that which was filtered through the brush that covered the opening. One of the men lit a match and advanced toward the rear of the cavern. Though he had been considerably warmed up by the scramble over rocks and bush when he entered the cave, the adventurer suddenly felt a chilly sensation and a blast of cold air seem to strike his face. Thinking it was imagination, he continued to advance, but the cold suddenly grew more inbut the cold suddenly grew more in-tense. Unable to account for the sen-sation and thinking that he had suddenly been taken ill he summoned his comrades, who met with the same experience. Half frightened, but determined to see the end of the mystery they procured a torch, and then discovered that they were standing on a cake of ice. Above them through a crevice in the roof came the slow drip-drop of the water which congealed into blocks of ice at their feet. Where the cold was generated they were unable to explain. So far as they could dis-cover, there were no further chambers or openings of any kind, and the ice cave promises to remain a mystery. There is said to be a similar cave in

"THE MELANCHOLY DAYS.

"The melancholy days are here," when the minister endures a "donation," which is applied in his salary; when your last winter's overcoat looks shabby, and you wonder where your summer's wages have gone; when patent medicine men put up hogsheads of "sure cures" for coughs and consumption, although the graveyards are fat; when the parson, the coal dealer, the fiddler and the liveryman have their innings; when last winter's latest style of cloak is older than Noah, and last season's worth dress isn't worth a season's worth dress isn't worth a — picayune; when politicians are haran-guing and instructing the dear people. some of whom are about as fit to vote as a William Goat; when the sad-eyed turkey congratulates himself because he will live until after election; when in millions of homes plans are already being made for the glad Christmas time, while in some millions of other homes the frost is but the forerunner of many long months of cold and hunger; when the farmer reckons up his season's profits and "reckons" that his cellar will hold all of his money; when the dear homewife has just turned the house upside down and wrong side out for the dirt that never came; when the for the dirt that never came; when the peregrinating evangelist is all eyes for pastures new and converts many; when in stores the straw hat has made way for the flannel shirt, and the lawn mower has stepped aside for the snow shovel; when the ice man is preparing to spend the winter in the south, and the coal man hopes to make enough money in the winter to spend the summer at the seashore; when the wild geese are winging southward and the tame ducks are flocking to the mattame ducks are flocking to the mat-inees; when the chestnut tree and the burnt cork men are brothers; when the patriot wades in mud, carries a torch and yells until his left lung drops out—all for the good of his party; when over on the hills they are preparing for apple parings and corn huskings, and the cider mill is running on full time; when the hon picker ning on full time; when the hop picker is coming home and the bark peeler is going away, and when the melancholy days have come, the saddest of the year!

Owing to a peculiar point of law recently raised by Attorney E. J. Brennan, of Pittsburg, in relation to filing of certificate of nomination and nomination papers with the secretary of the commonwealth, declaring the filing of such certificates for the office of representative to the general assembly to be invalid, claiming that such papers according to act of June, 1893, should be filed with the county commissioners in the respective counties in which they were made. Should this opinion be sustained by the judges of Dauphin county courts, every candidate in the state will be obliged to run as an independent candidate. Accordingly J. J. assembled at the opera house on Monday evening to witness the first performance of the Kirmess. All the seats in the house were filled when the entertainment began after some delay, which is excusable in a first performance. The decorations were in good taste and very pretty.

There were booths on the right and left, decorated with gay colors, for flowers and candy. A Spanish and dypay booth, brilliantly lighted, and a Japanese pagoda with varied colors and decorations. The stage was tastefully arranged. The calcium lights added to the effect and gave a charming combination of bright colors to the variegated costumes. The Mirror dance was first presented. Mrs. C. R. Munn and Miss Eula Carey executed their part very gracefully. The other parts in the scene were taken by about twenty gentlemen and ladies. Then a tableau and dance were presented by the entire company, while Hazel Wheater led the children through the tableau and dance were presented by the entire company, while Hazel Wheeler led the children through the intricate march. The Japanese Court dance was executed by the little people in national costumes, the youngest, Marion Munn, not 3 years old, winning much applause. The song, "The Three Little Maids," was then sung. The Flowers and Bees were represented by eight boys and girls. The Carnival dance with charming costumes was eight boys and girls. The Carnival dance, with charming costumes, was well received. Then followed the Gypsy dance, the Tarantelle, the Hornpipe, Dance of the Winds, English May Dance, Spanish Dance and the Indian Dance. The closing march and tab-leau was led by Mr. Morss, court jester, and made a fine ending to the entertainment.
