Hastening to the spot he saw one of the men fall to the ground while the other one ran away, carrying a basket on his arm. Duggan gave chase and the unknown man ran like a deer in the direction of Washington avenue. He dropped the basket when a few rods away and soon disappeared.

The man who had been assaulted proved to be Paul Obinski, an employe of the Kreugerman Iron Fence company, and the basket dropped by the assailant was the property of Obinski. During the struggle Obinski was knocked down and was in a dazed condition when rescued by the officer.

SOUTH SIDE NEWS.

Address of Supt. George Howell Before the Y. W. C. A.—John H. Senker Buried.

Those who were so fortunate as to attend the association rally at the rooms of the Young Women's Christian association on Cedar avenue, last night, were treated to a fine programme of musical and literary numbers. The address of Superintendent George Howell, of the Scranton schools on "The Benefits of Education" was a rare treat. He said in part:

We sometimes talk about self-made men, men who have been the architects of their own education and fortune. But every man who is a man, is self-made. Our mental destiny is just what we make it. Nothing can take the place of personal effort. If all the means and methods of education, and all the great teachers were brought together and made to bring their work to bear upon a boy or girl, all they could do would be to furnish the opportunities of improvement. Nothing but a miracle can teach a boy or girl anything independently of his or her own exertion. We are intellectually the making of ourselves. When Plato defined education as self-activity he gave the world a definition that philosophers could not criticise, that teachers could not reject.

This is such an extremely practical age that many people are led to believe that our schools can give a boy or girl a practical education, one that excludes theory. But our schools can not do this. First, practice must originate in theory. Our intelligent acts are directed by premeditation. Practice not founded on theory is all chance. No business man would make a venture without a credible theory. The mechanic who invents a valuable machine must have a plan or theory. He can not make an engine by working at random or trusting to the doctrine of chance. Copernicus, who established the correct theory of the present solar system and overthrew the old Ptolemaic system, had his theory. Columbus had his theory for western land; Franklin for lightning; Stephenson for the locomotive and Whitney for the cotton-gin.

Every great social and economic reform had its inception in theory.

A practical education without good theory is just as impossible as colored flowers without sunshine and just as useless as an automaton in a foot ball game.

We underestimate the value of fixed standards of excellence. Before the artist puts upon canvas the face of the mother he must have in mind the form and image which his brush must paint. Before the sculptor carves from the inanimate marble a lifelike statue he must have his model. And the man or woman who expects to carve out a good character in history without a model, will, in old age find himself or herself, like a storm tossed mariner without compass and with no port in sight.

Keep before you the forms and faces of men and women who have served the people well and you will kindle the heart with a flame of inspiration, a burning zeal of enthusiasm that can never die.

FUNERAL OF JOHN H. SENKER.

A large concourse of people attended the funeral of John H. Senker yesterday morning. The remains were arranged on a couch in the front parlor of his mother's home, 512 Stone avenue, and were almost hidden under a profusion of wreath of flowers bestowed by friends. The manner in which the remains reposed for view was suggested by Mrs. Margaret Sporr, of Meadville, an aunt of the deceased. The young man looked to be only asleep.

John Boyle O'Reilly Council, Young Men's Institute, attended the funeral in a body and the pall and flower bearers were selected from it. The former were Edward Morris, John Brogan, Frank McDonald, W. S. McGee, M. F. Brown and James Hayes. The latter were George McMullen and Thomas Hayes. The council sent a large floral piece. A high mass of requiem was celebrated in St. Mary's German church by Rev. George J. Stopper and interment was made in the Twentieth ward cemetery.

WANTED TO BURN HIM.

Negroes in a Florida Mill Attack the Manager—He Kills Two and Wounds Others in Defending Himself.

Chipley, Fla., Oct. 22.—Besieged by infuriated negroes, J. M. Criglar, manager of Hagerman's lumber mills at Hager Station, four miles west of here, defended himself with such effect that he killed two of his assailants and wounded four others. Criglar became engaged in a quarrel with one of his employes, and the other negroes drew pistols and began firing at the manager. Criglar ran to his office, locked himself in and opened fire with a Winchester on the maddened negroes who surrounded the building. For an hour the battle continued, and when the Louisville and Nashville train arrived at the station the negroes were preparing to set fire to the building and cremate Criglar. The train crew and passengers, however, rushed to Criglar's aid and dispersed the negroes.

The negroes had fired over 200 bullets in the buildings, but Criglar escaped by lying on the floor. As soon as the negroes fired a volley, however, he would rise and shoot at them through the windows. The negroes killed are Amos Judson and John Alexander. The wounded are Henry Simpson, Jack Nobles, Andrew Miller and Albert Lister. Simpson and Lister are thought to be fatally wounded.
