DEATH OF PATRICK BRIDGETT.

An Old and Respected Citizen of Carbondale Passes Away. At about 12.30 o'clock Saturday morning the spirit of Patrick Bridgett, one of Carbondale's prominent and most respected citizens, passed away to the home beyond. Mr. Bridgett was born in Ireland fifty-seven years ago. He came to Carbondale when a boy ten years old, and since that time has resided in this city. In September, 1869, he married Miss Kate Cavanaugh, who survives him. He leaves five children, three sons. John, Charles and Frank; and two daughters, Mary and Alice. Mr. Bridgett was a consistent member Mr. Bridgett was a consistent member of the Catholic church and he was al-ways active in church work, and his loss will be keenly felt by the congregation

The funeral services will take place this morning at 9 o'clock. A requiem mass will be celebrated at St. Rose church, and interment will be made in St. Rose cemetery.

MAD DOG AT LARGE.

Whole Neighborhood Frightened by the Antics of a Cur.

Great excitement was occasioned Sat urday morning on Belmont street and at Simpson by a mad dog running at large. John Lingfelter, of Belmont street, who was coming to the city, was first attacked near the rope barn on North Main street. The dog ran up delmont street snapping at children and dogs. Mr. Lingfelter following.un-il Simpson was reached. There severil persons joined the pursuit with guns and revolvers. Above the Eric tracks the animal was shot, but jumped up and went on. It was finally caught and went on. It was manify causin and chained and an end put to its life.

Several dogs and three children were bitten on its way up Belmont street. Fortunately the dog did not succeed in drawing blood on Mr. Lingfelter, but it left the marks of its teeth on his

The Mounts and the Lines -- How to Tell an Orator, a Thief and a Dude. The Funny Finger, the Religious Bump and the Obstinate Thumb. From the Globe-Democrat.

At a great political mass meeting last winter one of the speakers held up his hand, palm outward, to the audience. It was only for two seconds that the great, muscular white palm was spread out before them. But in that brief space of time all saw it—and felt it. The speaker paused in the address. He had made his point. He had declared such and such a thing to be the truth, and before the audience he spread out that palm in noble gesture.

As he lowered his hand a sigh of retery.

Mr. Blaine was at one time the very earnest friend of a statesman no less renowned in history. Once, getting a view of that statesman's hand. Blaine view of that states man's hand. Blaine is reported to have fallen into a moody spell. "I did not know he was a thief," he was heard to mutter, "until I saw his hand." And Flaine, the man who could run the whole gamut of politics and die without ever having been a millionaire, had no use for "a thief."

POINTS WORTH NOTING.

A mount at the base of the middle finger means the hoarding of money. A depression at the same spot means a spendthrift. There are people who have an elevation here upon the inside of the hand that almost deforms the paim. Such people hoard their money, while others spend. They may not be "spongers," but when they put down money they are going to see it come back in some form.

A mount at the base of the third fin-ger stands for devoutness,or, in a broad ger stands for devolutiess, or, in a broad interpretation, devotion to a cause. The candidate, William J. The elevation at the little finger—the little cushioned pad, as it appears to be—signifies generosity. McKinley has this well shown. He is a generous man—almost to prodigality. One hand has always been in his pocket for the needy. A man with a very broad pad here will never have any money and one with a never have any money, and one with a very high pad will spend it all at once— as fast as he gets it. Or, rather, will give it away or bestow it upon some one or something. It is the bump that allows no accumulation of riches.

The inventor has a bump on the outer and lower side of the hand. This in Edison and Nicola Tesla is so pro-nounced as to make the hand wedge-There is a very curious development to be fuond upon the hands of many people. It is upon the mount at the base of the thumb. This is the Mount base of the thumb. This is the Mount of Venus, and a high protuberance here signifies a dude. Men who dress extremely well have always a bony appearance upon this inside lobe. It is a very pronounced development of this portion of the Mount of Venus.

Should the entire mount be full and extend towards the middle of the hand it means a tendency to stay at home it means a tendency to stay at home and entertain, to dress well and be a society man. Ward McAllister's Mount of Venus took up one-half of the palm of venus took up one-nait of the pain of the hand. David B. Hill has just such a pronounced lobe. A broad, flat forefinger means a love of justice.
