THOMAS WALKER INJURED.

A Narrow Escape from Death in the Mines.

Thomas Walker was injured in the Frisble wine on Wednesday evening by an unusual accident, and narrowly escaped a terrible death.

While engaged on the track he stumbled so that his hat fell from his head currying the lighted lamp directly into a keg of powder that was near him. An explosion followed and the flames flashed through the narrow chamber. Mr. Walker was not directly over the powder or he could not have escaped with his life. His face and head, neck and hands were badly burned. Dr. F. E. Jenkins was summoned and dressed his injuries and he will be cared for at the hospital.

The borough council has decided not to vacate the Callender Gap road in the northern end of the borough, as had been decided upon at a meeting held a few weeks ago. The road is seidom traveled upon and because of its location on the top and side of a mountain, it is hard to keep in repair. Ecleving that it would be a saving to the borough to have the road vacated, the council decided to do so. There was such oppositon to the proposed plan of the council, from the Scott farmers and Jermyn merchants, that in deference to their wishes the project has been abandoned. The road is the shortest between this and Jermyn borough and the places on the west side of the mountain. It has been in use more than thirty years and is the only road runting over the tracts of coal land that lie in the northwest corner of the borough.

The Bryan and Sewall club held a large rally here last evening. After having a torch light parade through the principal streets, for which the same to a present the club assembled at the borough building, on the public square, and listened to a Democratte discussion of the issues of the campaign by F. GREATNESS OF THE NATIONS Recent Figures Which Challenge England's Claim to Precedence.

rom the New York Sun. It has been the boast of English-men that Queen Victoria, the senior in respect of period of official service among the monarchs of the world, rules over not only a larger crea of national dominion and colonies, but also over a larger number of subjects than any other ruler of a government in the world. The British empire, it has been said, extends to every part of the globe, and the sun never sets upon Queen Victoria's realm. The basis of this claim of precedence among govern-ments has been found in figures which give the territorial area of the British empire as 11,000,006 square miles, and the population of Great Britain and colonies as 281,000,000. Following the tritish empire, in respect of population, came, in the order named, first China, then Russia, the United States, with to change this, for they show the total population of the British empire (not officially computed since the census of 1891) to now be 367,000,000, while the population of China, or more properly of the Chinese Empire, by late and authentic figures, is 402,000,000, or 35,-000,000 greater, Great Britain in respect of population, therefore, ranks second to China, and the readjustment of England's sovereignty in South Africa likely, later an, to curtail rather than to increase the present claims of the to increase the present claims of the British statisticians. He was known to the community a 'Ole Man Scraggs," and was noted for the amount of work he did not do The village hotel was his favorite leafing place, for the reason, perhaps, that it was here that the man who lavishly asks everybody to have a drink is most frequently encountered. His wife had expostulated with him and tried to make him sign the pledge, but with-out avail. He had not even the virtue of Rip Van Winkle. He would not go so far as to promise. In a spot on the porch where the sun filtered through some vines just enough to make the temperature high enough for comfortable slumber, he was dozing the after-noon away with the small of his back in the seat of his chair. His pose was that of beatific indolence.

"Hello, Scraggs," said a drumme who frequently visited the town, "have a drink?"

He lunged forward from the chair and storned with a violent jerk. An expression of dismay came over his face. He tugged with all his might at his right foot, but it did not budge.
"Help! Help!" he yelled. "Send for the doctor! I am paralyzed."
"What's the matter?" asked the drummer. "Is your foot asleep?"

"That foot can't go to sleep," he answered, as he looked wildly around. "It's made of wood. I've got a wooden eg, but this is the first time in my life it ever refused to walk when any

WEALTHY HOTEL PORTER. Who Has Accumulated a Fortane of $200,000.

From the Denver Times Joe Clemmons came down from Ward camp on Saturday and was a visitor at the Colorado Mining Stock Exchang today. He came to Denver for the pur pose of receiving an option payment on the Morning Star mine at Ward, which has been bonded to Denver parties through a Mrs. Irwin, of Boulder, the purchase price being $75,000. This property has been producing steadily for the last two years, and Mr. Clem-mons has received the full benefit of all revenues from lessors, the property having been worked altogether on the leasing plan. When the Windsor hotel was opened Joe Clemmons was installed head port-er, and held that position for thirteen years. He took much interest in min-ing matters and had a prospecting outfit in every new camp in the state and finally drifted into Boulder county After working a property at James town for a while he bought out the lease on the Morning Star, and later secured a bond on it. The mine gave evidence of good management, the party from whom he had bought the lease having sunk $10,000, so that Joe has made it pay in production over $200,000. This sum has placed the old Windsor head porter in clover.
