It must have caused wonder to some of the old-timers of the rank and flie in the audience to notice the addresses of the leaders who guided them before the time Democracy dared endorse a platform like that of the Chicago ar-ticle. But County Chairman Jennings was there and presided. C. G. Boland and his bland smile were there, ap-plauded everything and wound up the meeting with a look-out-for-rand speech. Edward Merrffield, the Con-gressional candidate, was there, and made a speech of apology for the Chi-cago platform; the sarcastic, stalwart, flery and eloquent Colonel Frank J.

Colonel Fitzsimmons' robust figure, however, was re-cognized in all its fine proportions and he was yelled to the echo. He removed his hat and seated himself while receiving more yells than did Mr. Merri-

Then Mr. Boland, of the glad hand, came in. His smile was blond and he came with the band and with a twosided banner and there was applause, but whether it was for the glad-hand and the bland smile or for the banner is not known. The banner on one side is not known. The batter on one side bore a carricature of Mark Hanna and this inscription, "No Cross of Gold; No Hannacrat Government," On the oth-er it bore Bryan's likeness and these words, "Bryan and the Plain People Against Monopoly." Candidate Merrifield evidently Against aconopoly.

Candidate Merrifield evidently thought the banner was the cause of the naise for he asked some one to hand it to him and placed it egainst the wall back of the platform with Bryan's pleture outward. They applauded that, then Chairman Jennings, then the Forest band which came in from the street. The band played and Chairman Jennings opened the meeting.

THE MEETING OPENED. He addressed his audience as fellow citizens, but corrected himself and said "silverites." He predicted the election of Bryan and the local Democratic Deket and introduced the first speaker Attorney Conry, he of the red orntory,
Mr. Conry's greatest effort was concontrated upon his hint that Lauterback and Roosevelt of New York city might try and thwart the whole Democency if it endeavored to install Bryan as president. The dire intention of as president. The dire intention of those two gentlemen would be circumvented, he selemnly proclaimed, "if it earth." Mr. Merrifield concluded his address which was brief, by an argument to prove that a dollar with an establish-ed value of $3 cents can be legislated to a value of 100 cents.

The band played, and Chairman Jennings took occasion to publicly proclaim the thanks of the county committee for the assistance rendered it by the rank and hie, and to laud the speakers for their campaign work. He ended by introducing Colonel Fitzsimmons, who made the speech that created the most enthusiasm and the loudes

Colonel Pitzsimmons predicted that to-day would witness the hercest battle of ballots ever waged. He said it had been a campaign of the people against pampered monopoly, and that bemo-eracy would score a sweeping victory. Local and national Republican cam-paign orators and bolting Democrats received from the flery coronel some o the scathing sarcasm for which he is noted, and he wound up with an eulogy of Mrs. Bryan after referring to her husband as the "leader of the commoners" and worthy to be with Washington and Lincoln one of an im-morall trinity.

Mr. Boland, his bland smile, and the frequent waving of tils gind hand, fin-ished the meeting. He described the silver cause one of "truth, justice and liberty," urged his heavers to be watchful at the polis to-day, and scathingly referred to ex-Mayor Powderly, who had been neglected by Colonel Fitzsimmons.

The gathering gave three burrahs and a parting yell, and then, in a mournful way, walked itself out of the building, which will be used to-night by the Republican County committee as public headquarters for receiving returns of McKinley's election
