WALL STREET'S MONEY JUBILEE

A noteworthy feature of the London orders was that there was no limit placed upon the prices to be paid furstocks, the instructions generally having been to "buy at the market," meaning that the Britishers were bound to purchase our securities, no matter what the figure.

THRONG IN THE STOCK EX-

When Chairman McClure officially opened the exchange, at 19 o'clock, the scene was one the like of which has rarely been witnessed. Ther after ther of seats were occupied by women hand-somely dressed. Nearly all of them carried lorgnettes and watched the brokers on the floor of the exchange intently.

The fall of Chairman McClure's gavel was the signal for trading of an unusual character. The few brokers who remained short of the market in the hope of the defeat of McKinley became perfectly frentic in their efforts to get under cover, and the bulls made them pay dearly for their temerity.

No sconer had the chairman of the exchange given the signal for the be-ginning of trading than there was one ling of the fruit and by providing a grand rush on the part of every broker suitable place for storing until the eemed to have buying orders in unlimited amounts, not only for the standard speculative issues, but for practically all the low-priced stocks as well. Opening dealings were of such a stirring rature that it was impossible in many instances for the official reporters on the floor of the exchange to obtain the prices at which first transactions were made. Thus the "ticker" announced the opening dealings in a number of stocks at which different figures.

For instance, the reported opening of Sugar was 1,500 shares at from 125 to 121 which prices converte with 1135, the 12), which prices compare with 1183, the price current at the close of Monday, representing an advance to the hignest of 6% points, which was the maximum rise of the morning. VERY HEAVY TRANSACTIONS. The transactions assumed enormou proportions, the total sales of stocks in the first ten minutes alone having aggregated $0,000 shares, which amount was swelled to 270,000 shares by the end of the first hour. The activity also spread to the bond department, and the sales of railway and miscellaneous bonds at 11 a. m. reached the heavy total of $2,000,000, while prices jumped up sharply on enormous buying for in-

Before midday, however, the price had rallied to 64½c., but there was an absence of demand. Commercial bars were quoted at 644c. Commercial bars were quoted at 6414c., with the market very dull.

As a result, the London market for American railway shares in the early dealings became strong and prices jumped up several points above a par-ity with Monday's closing figures at New York.
