Young Men Who Tore Down the Flag Given a Hearing on a Charge of Malicious Mischief.

"Malicious mischief" is the charge against the young men who are ac-cused of tearing down a flag Tuesday morning on Jackson street and the morning on Jackson street and the case now goes to court.

Barney McAnulty, who was wanted by the police for complicity in the mischief, gave himself up to the police last evening and at 8.30 o'clock Alderman Kellow held police court. McAnulty, and Neal Campbell, the two against whom the evidence appears to bear, and Job Whitehouse, Harry Hubbard, Edward Porter, and Patrick Cawley, witnesses, were present, also a number of friends of the accused young men. The principal thing brought out by the hearing was that as has been intimated hearing was that as has been intimated before, the act in tearing down the flag was not done in any spirit of insuit to the emblem, but was a mere material misdeed. Cawley swore that he did not know who it was tore down the flag. He admitted being in the party and that the accused prisoners were his companions at the time of the act. Mc-Anulty said upon onth that he did not have anything to do with it; he admitted that he ran admitted that he ran.

admitted that he ran.
"Why did you run if you knew nothing about it?" was asked. McAnulty answer was that he knew that some one was going to be arrested. Job Whitehouse gave the most straight forward testimony of any. He said that Campbell was the person who tore down the flag and that McAnulty and Campbell afterward dragged it about eight vards on the sidewalk. He, eight yards on the sidewalk. He, Whitehouse, picked up the flag and was folding it when Officer Hart came upon the scene, Campbell swore that he did not do it; neither did he run. The testimony of Edward Porter and Harry Hubbard was not as incriminating. The case was held over to court. McAnulty and Campbell furnishing bail in the sum of $500 for a re-appearance. Cawley's father became bonds-man. The four witnesses were held in $200 ball each on their own recogniz-

IRISH CHARACTER.

Rev. A. D. Filan, a Catholic priest of Philadelphia, lectured last evening in St. Patrick's church on Jackson street to an audience which more than street to an ancience which more than half filled the large lecture room. The subject of the discourse, "Light and Shade of Irish Character," was in it-self suggestive of entertainment and the reverend speaker was eloquent and thrilling in his discussion of it. He uncovered the clouds and sunshine of Irish life in the native land, telling pointed anecdotes to illustrate what he called the "bright, sparkling wit and pure exhuberant humor" of the race. He mentioned Swift, Curran, Sheridan and O'Connor of the most famous of Irish wit and showed the style pe-culiar to each. "Irchard lacks unity," was one of the speaker's sentences in gently touching upon whatever faults there are in the Irish character. To this lack of concentrated effort he asthis lack of concentrated effort he asthis lack of concentrated effort he as-cribed the dependency of the land. Father Filan also denounced intem-perance as a great evil of Ireland. "Not that the trish drink more," said the speaker, "but when an Irishman gets intoxicated he does not quietly sleep it off like the other men, but he wants the world to know of it."

ANNOYING CHURCH GOERS.

A gang of from thirty to forty young bloods came together to the Hampton Street church last Sunday evening at church time and so completely blocked the sidewalk that people were obliged take to the street to pass to the irch. Police Officer Whiting was called and after encountering much resistance succeeded in dispersing the crowd. One of the gang, a young man named Daniel Lenahan, who lives with hamed Daniel Lemanan, who lives with his parents at 1017 Hampton street, was arrested on a warrant and taken before Alderman Moses Tuesday night, who gave him a hearing and imposed a nominal line of $2 and costs for disorderly conduct and resisting an officer. The authorities are determined to punish these miscreants who seem to have no other purpose in gathering there except to annoy church services and church going people. Other ar-rests are likely to follow.

The receipts of the American telegraph companies are in excess of $25,000,000 a year, and if added to the postal receipts, as in the case in England and Germany, would send the total far above anything which the most sanguine European computer could hope to reach.

There are 70,000 post offices in the United States against 20,000 in Great Britain, 25,000 in Germany, 7,000 in France, 9,000 in Austro-Hungary, and 6,000 in Italy. The compactness of the population in England enables post office department there to operate business at a minimum expense, for the fact is well known that in thickly business at a minimum expense, for the fact is well known that in thickly populated countries or States the post office business of any government can be conducted at a profit; it is the scattered settlements and mail wagon routes that entail the losses. The New York city post office, for instance, yields the government a profit of $4,000,000 an year, the post office business of the State of Massachusetts $1,500,000, and Pennsylvania and Illinois $1,000,000 each, but in a majority of the States there is a loss. $900,000 in Nearasas, $700,000 in lowa, $1,250,000 in Nebraska, $100,000 in Nevada (the total receipts in that State are less than $70,000, $150,000 in Arizona, $200,000 in Alabama, $200,000 in New Mexico, where the receipts are less than $100,000; $750,000 in Texas, $500,000 in Virginia, and $300,000 in Wooming, where the receipts are less than $100,000. The net loss on the post office business of the United States amounted last year to $10,000,000, the shortage being made up by appropriations from the Treasury which have averaged in recent years about $6,000,000. In-1882, 1883, and 1884 the postal revenues of the United States came nearer being sufficient to meet the expenses than at any previous time since the close of the civil war. In 1881, indeed, the government made a profit from its post office business.

It is not to be inferred from this that the postal business of the United States is unskilfully managed, for the opposite of this proposition is true. The fact is that the American theory of post office matters is predicated on the idea that this item of revenue is not to be regarded as a government monopoly managed for gain, but as a public con-

be regarded as a government monopoly managed for gain, but as a public con-venience conducted by the government with that end in view. The govern-ment handles and delivers letters, packages, newspapers, postal cards, and transacts a large business in money orders as a convenience to the people of the United States without any notion of profit, for so soon as the revenues exceed the receipts the government proceeds to cut down the rates. By this plan the uniform two-cent postage rate has been reached, and ul-timately, post office officials expect, there will be a uniform one-cent rate for mail matter throughout the United States. In European countries a dif-ferent view prevails. They run their post office departments as a source of post office departments as a source of revenue, and include generally the telegraph, and in Germany the telephone, service in order to add to the profit. In England there is in addition the savings bank system, the English post office department receiving cash deposits for individuals, the gross amount of which is now nearly $500,000,000. While there was a loss on the American post office department. $509,000,000. While there was a loss on the American post office department of $10,000,000 last year, the profit of the English post office department for the same period was $15,000,000, and other countries of Europe made a profit from the post office, too. The net revenue in Austro-Hungary was $5,000,000, in Russia $1,000,000, and the profit in France was greater than in either of the other two. $7,500,000. The railway the other two, $7,500,000. The railway telegraph system of France is under the direction of the French post office the direction of the French post office department, and yields a considerable revenue. In Italy there has been since 1875 a system of post office savings banks, the lowest amount taken in which is one lire (20 cents). Interest is paid on these postal deposits at the rate of 3½ per cent. There is $40,000,000 on deposit in the postal savings banks of Italy.
