THE MONARCH OF OATMEAL.

The interesting Career of Ferdinand Schumaker, Who Has Gone Up and Down from Poverty to Great Wealth.

From the Chicago Times-Herald.

In the $2,000,000 assignment of Ferdinand Schumacher. "the oatmeal king."

NOTHING AT THE START.

nand Schumacher, "the oatmeal king," is another evidence of the dangers that attend the handling of large sums of money. It is possible for a man to start on a salary of $50 a week and become wealthy. Give the same man $50,000 a week and it is more than an even chance that he would waste the principal or property producing such income and die poor. It is one thing to make money and quite another to keep it. This financial truism Mr. Schumacher will doubtless earnestly indorse.

Schumacher is one of those frequent products of America—a self-made man. He has realized the full promise of the republic to the industrious, the thritty and the honest man. He has not been of the class of self-made men who have been given over to earnest worship of themselves. He has always thought well of himself, as he had every reason to do, but his self-respect never amounted to veneration. He was in a way a philanthropist and has backed the business enterprises of many who would have been commercial wrecks—small but total losses—had it not been for his aid. Mr. Schumacher's great fad was temperance. He devoted much time and a great deal of money to the cause, and in 1894 showed his good faith by accepting the nomination as candidate for governor on the Ohio Prohibition ticket. He may have received 2,000 out it. Schumacher took well and was gen-erally esteemed in the village. Presently his trade enlarged to such really esteemed in the village.

Presently his trade enlarged to such an extent that he was forced to buy a little push wagon or hand cart to deliver the oatmeal to the regular subscribers. The kitchen wasn't large enough to furnish the necessary mill capacity, and he erected a 10 by 12 building in his yard, wherein he shuck oats and manufacture meal. Soon he had to buy a horse and wagon, so great had his enterprise become, and in time samples of his product were required by Cleveland and Pittsburg merchants. Then came heavy orders. The mill was enlarged until the buildings covered acres. A large part of Akron's industrial importance is due to the evolution of Schumacher's domestic oatmeal mill.

A MILLIONAIRE.

The miller in twenty years was worth $500,000, and in thirty was accounted a millionaire. He branched out in the cereal business, built a mansion and made inestments of various characters. He built strawboard mills, one of them in Marseilles, ill., and with other industries which he established practically built the town. Three years ago he combined his various milling interests gentleman who wrote a book of colossal falsehoods, all purporting to be his personal travels and experiences. This book has been translated into many languages, and the naive audacity of its falsehoods has furnished lively read-

Mr. Schumacher retained his early habits of frugality through all his improving fortunes. If he was conspicuted in time samples of his product were frequired by Cleveland and Pittsburg merchants. Then came heavy orders. The mill was enlarged until the buildings covered acres. A large part of Aktor is industrial importance is due to the evolution of Schumacher's domestic oatmeal mill.
