Worthy Master J. H. Brig-ham height considered a number of ham briefly considered a number of pertinent topics. Of agricultural conditions, he said:

Of agricultural conditions, he saw, The farmer who is receiving fair returns for his labor and invested capital is now the exception. There has been no general failure of crops, but the prices received for most of them do not pay for the labor of production. Such con-ditions are case, discouraging.

ditions are very discouraging. It is well known to all of us that com-petition in the growth and marketing of many of the products of the farm is world wide. machinery and skill. Such conditions combined with continually improving facilities for transporting of crops of these countres to market may well awaken apprehension in the minds of the American formers.

We cannot control production, nor regulate the cost thereof in foreign countries. There is no profit in selling in the markets of the world below the cost of production. If we cannot compete with the cheaper land and labor in these markets we can at least con-trol our own markets and produce nearly everything needed to supply our own people. Why should we buy sugar, wool, etc., from other countries when we can produce them at home-AGRICULTURE SHOULD BE PRO-TECTED.

The people seem to have decided in Tavor of adequate protection to American industries. We can, therefore, without regard to our own personal views, consistently demand for agri-culture the full mensure of protection accorded to other industries, and we should anothit Kirschner and he tried should accept nothing less.
