SOME ONE'S MEMORY BADLY AT FAULT

Directly Conflicting Testimony in the McCarthy-Scanlon Case.

PLAINTIFF MAKE BROAD DENIALS

The Second Week of Civil Court Opens Up With a Very Interesting Suit Over a Judgment Note. Schloss-Cobb Cases Amicably Settled After Juries Twice Disagree About Them—The Cases Continued—Other Doings in Court.

One of the hardest fought cases that the circuit court has seen in its history has been the McCarthy-Scanlon case, which was called for trial before Judge Archibald in the Federal court room yesterday morning. O'Brien & Kelly represent the plaintiff, and Attorney M. P. Cawley, F. J. Fitzsimmons and Watson & Zimmerman, the defense. At adjournment yesterday the case was only fairly started, owing to the constant wrangling of the attorneys. An offer was insisted upon in almost every instance when a new witness was called. The action is to recover $1,000 principal and interest on a judgment note which Martin Scanlon gave M. A. McCarthy, July 15, 1888. The plaintiff alleges that it was given in consideration of cash value. The defendant alleges that there was no consideration, and that consequently it is not binding. This is the second trial of the case. A verdict was given for the plaintiff in the former trial, but the supreme court when appealed, reversed the verdict and ordered a new trial. In the first trial the plaintiff's attorneys brought out on cross-examination that the note was given to the defendant by a man named Ryan who was suing him for $10,000 damages. Judge Gunster, the defendants alleged, had returned the same court charges, the jury to the effect that the defendant directly admitted this intention of fraud while it was, they argued, only brought out on cross-examination. This is supposed to be one of the principal reasons for the new trial.

Yesterday the plaintiff's attorneys tried to reintroduce this matter of fraud but notwithstanding two hours of the closest questioning by Mr. Kelly, of Mrs. Scanlon, it was not successful. When the case, which was first on the list, was called, Colonel Fitzsimmons moved for a continuance, but it was denied. The plaintiff's only witness in chief was Hon. T. V. Powderly, who identified the signature on the note as that of Mr. Scanlon.

THEORY OF THE DEFENSE.

Mr. Cawley opened for the defense outlining in a clear and concise way what they proposed to show, which in brief was that there was no consideration whatever. It was barely intimated that the note was given to defend Mr. Scanlon as noted above and to defeat the claim of the donor interest of his wife. It was also asserted that Mr. McCarthy made a demand for the payment of the note until after Mr. Scanlon's death, although the time on the note had expired, several years previous to his death, and was being paid by Mr. Scanlon, the defendant, when called to the stand after the dinner recess, testified to several conversations with Mr. McCarthy, during which he told her that there was no consideration on the note in question or the others on record in court, and not to worry about the matter. She was heard in her room, while she was ill, following the birth of her child in 1888. Another occurred on a street in Wilkes-Barre, where she was with Mr. Scanlon, when they were on their way to Ashley to secure the note. They encountered Mr. McCarthy driving toward the central part of the town and she imparted him to go back with them that they might get the note. He pleaded pressing business and said it would be impossible for him to turn back, but assured Mrs. Scanlon again that she should not worry, that as her husband and he had told her, there was no consideration on the notes, and that there would never be any bother about them. He also chided her for continually worrying her husband about the notes and for doubting their statements.

Mr. Kelly tried to bring out what the notes were given for, if there had been consideration. Mrs. Scanlon answered that she had never heard of any notes, and at the best could only guess. As a guess does not count on the witness stand, Mr. Kelly, not a little perturbed, allowed her to quit the stand without insisting on finding out what her guess might be.

SHE HEARD IT ALSO.

Anna Quinnan, Mrs. Scanlon's daughter by her first husband, who lived at the Scanlon home for a time, was next called. She testified to having overheard the conversation which Mrs. Scanlon alleged took place in her sick room. Mr. McCarthy, she said, told Mrs. Scanlon that there was nothing given for the notes, and not to be bothering her head about them. Mrs. Quinnan, who worked in the capacity of a household servant at the Scanlon residence in 1888, swore she saw Mr. McCarthy there and heard a conversation between him and Mrs. Scanlon concerning notes. She was sitting on the porch and only accidentally heard the talk, and as it did not concern her she did not pay anything more than casual attention to it.

Here the defense rested and Mr. McCarthy being called in rebuttal, went to the stand and swore that he not only did not have the conversations which Mrs. Scanlon and the other witnesses testified to, but positively affirmed that he never inside Martin Scanlon's home after his marriage to the defendant, and that he never met Mrs. Scanlon in Wilkes-Barre or Ashley, except once on a Sunday, when she came down to see him in company with Mrs. Martin to try to induce him to have Mr. Scanlon sign over his property to her, arguing that she could manage her husband better than he, who was getting careless regarding his business affairs. He also testified that he loaned money at various times to Mr. Scanlon and that the note in question was given him for the consideration of $1,000 cash. He and Mr. Scanlon, he said, were old friends, having known each other for over thirty years. John J. Brown, of the firm of Garney & Brown, testified to meeting Mr. Scanlon on a Jersey Central train one day in the summer of 1888, and hearing from him in the course of a conversation that he (Mr. Scanlon) was going to Ashley to borrow some money from his old friend, McCarthy, who had often loaned him money and who would favor him in that manner any time he wanted it. Some months after Mr. Brown stated, he saw Mr. Scanlon and was told by him that he had gotten "what he went after that day." At the conclusion of Mr. Brown's examination court adjourned.

SCHLOSS-COBB CASES ENDED.

The Schloss-Cobb cases were brought to a termination yesterday by an amicable adjustment. A judgment of $50 was entered against the defendant, Frank M. Cobb, in the case in which Jacob Schloss was plaintiff, and a judgment for $75 in the case in which Samuel Schloss was plaintiff. The case arose out of injuries which Samuel Schloss, the son of Jacob, sustained several years ago when a big dog ran over and kicked him off a piece of the yard's ear. Mr. Cobb denied ownership of the dog. The case was tried twice before, each time the jury disagreeing.

BOARD OF TRADE'S TWO BIG SCHEMES

Were Settled at Last Night's Meeting of the Board.

THE BANQUET WILL TAKE PLACE

Committee to Make All Arrangements—Proposition to Cheaply Decorate the New Rooms Was Rejected—They Will Be Beautified on a Rich Scale—Colonel F. L. Hitchcock and President Kay Delegates to the National Board.

The board of trade will have its elaborate and much discussed banquet. The question was settled at last night's board meeting as was the matter of decorating the new rooms and an adjournment was taken until next meeting terminated with a lengthy and ardent discussion of two resolutions on finance proposed for presentation to the board. Vice President Luther Keller presided over the early part of the meeting, relating the chair to W. P. Kennedy later.

That the banquet be held and that all preliminary arrangements be referred to the regular banquet committee for their consideration. The members of the banquet committee are: E. L. Fuller, chairman; Charles Schaner, T. Von Sterch, C. H. Pond and K. G. Conroy.

Under the order of new business Secretary Atherton stated that the building committee was unwilling to authorize the expenditure necessary for decorating the rooms in the new building according to the estimates of Architect Holden, which involved an expenditure of over $1,000. In order to present the following statement of the board's finances: On hand, $1,582.29; William E. Fink, $100.00; total resources, $2,682.29; estimate of expenses, Jan. 1, 1897, balance, $2,569.29; estimated cost of furniture, etc. for new rooms, $1,000.00; balance, $1,582.29. It was explained that the cost of the banquet would exceed the sum in the treasury by from $100 to $140.

DECORATIONS OF THE ROOMS.

To test the views of the members, W. D. Kinsler, chairman of the committee on the auditorium, secretary's office and library, the three rooms comprising the suite, be treated after an economical plan suggested by a local decorator, who estimated the cost at $150.

Conrad Schroeder, the contractor who erected the building and who is in charge of the interior, and who has opposed the cheaper scheme. He remarked upon the architect's idea in planning the rooms on a scale that invited a local decorator, who had been treated. The effect would be harsh and unattractive if the decorations were other than thoroughly in keeping with the architect's plan.

DEATH OF MRS. RACHEL CASE.

She Was the Sister of the Late W. W. Manness of this City. At the residence of William H. Chase, at Tolyhanna Mills, yesterday morning, at 6 o'clock, after an illness of two weeks, Mrs. Rachel Manness, widow of the late Samuel Manness, in the eighty-third year of her age. She was one of eight children of the late William W. Manness, of Scranton, who was a younger brother of the late John Manness, of Huntington county, New Jersey. Going as a young woman and for companionship into the home of her eldest sister, who had become wife to Samuel Case, she was benevolent to be permanently identified with that home, and, after ten years, took up her abode there. She was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, in whose communion she lived and died, and was a devoted and active member of the church. She was the highest esteem by all who knew her. As a good woman she goes out from the circle of friends, to whom she was a faithful and loving friend, but leaves with them a fragrant memory of her pure character and unselfish life.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday at 10 o'clock, and proceed from her late residence to Stroudsburg for burial.

BUILDING TRADES COUNCIL.

Held a Meeting Last Night in Hubert's Hall, Wyoming Avenue.

The Building Trades Council re-organized last night at an enthusiastic meeting which was held in Hubert's hall on Wyoming avenue. Business of vital importance to the Building Trades union for discussion, and from all indications the meeting was a boom in trades unionism this winter. The painters of this city are about to organize an early local union, W. P. Keller is the duly authorized organizer, and will be glad to hear from any painter who wishes to join; his address is 64 Adams avenue.

BREGISTINE AGAIN ARRESTED.

Julius Abrams Alleges That Harry Threatened to "Do" Him.

Julius Abrams, in the employ of the Bell Clothing house, on Lackawanna avenue, came into Alderman Miller's office yesterday afternoon in an excited frame of mind and swore out a warrant for Harry Bregistine for assault and battery and threatening to kill him. Harry is employed as salesman at Dreison's clothing store, which is next door to the Bell. He and Abrams got quarreling over the efforts of each to get ahead of the other in bringing trade to their respective stores. Bregistine said that ever since Abrams got into the office yesterday he threatened to "do" him. He declared it was right. He claims he only pushed Abrams away from him. Alderman Miller made him furnish bail for his appearance at court.

ON FOOT BALL FIELDS.

Pennsylvania Eleven Will Practice in Secret for the Harvard Game. The Contest of Saturday.

Philadelphia, Nov. 16.—The Pennsylvania Varsity eleven played a team of Pennsylvania graduates headed by George Woodruff, the Quaker's head coach, and the college boys had no trouble in whipping the old players by a score of 22 to 6. As the graduates had not the semblance of team play and no signals, they could not advance the ball, and the Varsity went through their line almost at will. The Varsity played a hard, dashing game, and the running of Gelbert and Morris was particularly brilliant. The former's touchdown being made after a run of seventy-five yards. The touchdown scored by the old-time stars was a gift, as it was made on a play that would never have been allowed against another college team.
