FUNERAL OF MRS. LYNETT.

Services Were Held at St. Mary's Catholic Church, Dunmore.

The funeral of Mrs. Catherine Lynett took place in Dunmore yesterday morn-ing at her late home on Chestnut street ing at her late home on Chestnut street and was largely attended. At St. Mary's Catholic church a sol-emn high mass of requiem were cele-brated by the pastor, Rev. M. B. Don-lan, who was assisted by Rev. M. F. Crane, of Avoca, and Rev. J. I. Dunn, of Green Ridge. The church choir sang. Ave Maria was sung by Miss Kate Mongan. Interment was made in the cemetery of St. Mary's church. The pall-bearers were M. A. Taylor, M. E. Dolphin, F. T. Morgan, James Cullen, J. J. Scott and Thomas O'Hara. J. J. Scott and Thomas O'Hara. The sermon preached by Father Don-

In was a pronounced tribute, and a deserved one, to the charity, love and tenderness that had featured the beau-tiful character of Mrs. Lynett. Through her life in and without the church she had furnished an example that de-served emulation and which had won served emulation and which had wor for her access to God's kingdom.

GOOD SHOW AT DAVIS' THEATRE.

Some Old Time Favorites Are Seen There Again.

Harry Thorne and his clever wife, Maggie Willett, are at Davis' theater for this week and they bring along with them one of the cleanest and most entertaining vaudeville shows that has ever been seen here. The two perform-ances, yesterday afternoon and evening, were enjoyed by unusually large audiences. The show is so good that every part is worthy of special men-tion.

As a curtain raiser a good, whole-some comedy, "An Up Town Flat," is given by Willet and Rogers, McAvoy and Thorne. Two married couples live in the flat, and the struggle for the boss and Thorne. Two married couples live in the flat, and the struggle for the boss of the roost between wifeys and hub-bles is woefully true to nature. Fol-lowing this the Delmanning brothers do some neat and novel dancting. Then comes the greatest exhibition of jug-glery ever seen in the city. It is given by Leavitt and Nevello, a man and woman, who are styled on the pro-gramme "Europe's Greatest." The dex-terity with which the duo handle the common three and four ball toss and catch is simply marvelous. Nevello, the man, does the most delicate balanc-ing feats—but the only way to appre-ciate them is to see them. Miss Lulu Thies gives some charac-ter songs and imitates with her lips the songs of a half dozen kinds of birds. After this is a somedy sketch by Mc-Aroy and Rogers. Due of the best things in this rood show is Emil Hastings' stereopticon views, while William Corcoran in a pleasing voice sings the popular senti-mental songs of the day, such as "Cast Aside," "Only Me." "Mother Was a Lady," etc., the colored views pretify illustrating the sentiments of the songs.

case is as follows: This case turns entirely on the facts, and a full view of them, therefore, he-comes necessary. They appear from the evidence to be as follows: Mrs. Hannah Driesen, the defendant, for several years prior to December, 1895, was in the gen-eral clothing business in Scranton. The store was managed by her husband, Louis Driesen, who had general authority to act for his wife, but Mrs. Driesen also took an active part in the conduct of the busi-ness. On Dec. 23, 1895, eight confessions of judgment were entered against her in this court, amounting to over $16,000, up-ward, on which executions were imme-diately issued, the stock of goods in the store levied upon by the sheriff and the whole sold out at public sale Dec. 30, fol-lowing. All of these confessions of judg-ment were executed to relatives and friends and with one exception bore date a few days prior to their entry. FAILURE WAS FRAUDULENT.

FAILURE WAS FRAUDULENT.

FAILURE WAS FRAUDULENT. The conclusion to be reached from all the facts is evident. Without closing our eyes to the manifest outcome of them, we cannot but say the failure was a fraudulent one. The validity of the judg-ments by which it was effected is not in-volved in this proceeding and we do not pass upon them. It is the purpose of the defendant in confessing them with which we have now alone to deal. Assuming that they represent an honest indebted-ness, still the evidence shows that they were given without suggestion or solici-tation and were purely voluntary on Mrs. Driesen's part. Even taking her story of expense and business losses, neither of these involve or discharge any such finan-briesen's part. Even taking her story of expense and business losses, neither of these involve or discharge any such finan. cial pressure as compelled her to the step taken; but discrediting the story in the light of her repeated statements to the contrary, as we well may, there is noth-ing to justify it. If we do her injustice in this conclu-sion, and we have little fear upon that score, why have not the facts which look so decidedly against her been cleared? What has become of the money realized from the fall business running into thousands of dollars? It does not do to say that it has been paid out to other creditors; such payment should be proved. It is said that the checks have been lost in the disturbance incident to the sheriff's sale; but we discover no such disturbance in the defendant's business as that; it has in fact gone on altogether too undisturbed to bear out such a sug-gestion, if not indeed to wear the face of an honest transaction. Where are the books of the business, which would show the state of her cash and merchandise accounts? It is asserted that she had. Mr. Kaufman saw and examined them and went over the accounts which they con-tained, and hey were seen in use at the store by others.
