MRS. MCCARTHY'S BODY FOUND AT PLYMOUTH

Three Young Men Out Fishing in the Susquehanna Discovered It. HAD BEEN CARRIED TWELVE MILES

She and Her Two Grand Children Were Knocked From a Railroad Bridge at Moosic on Friday, Nov. 6. Body Taken to Her Husband's Home on the South Side--Children Yet Missing.

The body of Mrs. Mary McCarthy, who, with her two grandchildren, May and Margaret, and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Klink, of Connetquot, was knocked by an Erie and Wyoming Valley engine from the bridge near the Horseshoe bend at Moosic into the Lackawanna river and drowned on Friday, November 6, was discovered Thanksgiving evening in the Susquehanna river at Plymouth.

The only woman heard of as being missing and expected to be found in the river was Mrs. McCarthy. Word was sent to her Klink, her son-in-law, and he went down yesterday and identified the remains by the clothing. The features were unrecognizable and decomposition had far advanced.

ACCOUNT OF THE DROWNING. Mrs. McCarthy and her grandchildren were coming from Connetquot to Moosic to take a street car for her home. The mother of the children had a day or two before that given birth to a daughter, and they were going to spend a week with their grandmother. As they were crossing the bridge on which the track runs that leads to the Old Forge breaker an engine came along just as they were in the middle of it, and knocked them into the river.

AMUSEMENTS. The management of the Academy of Music will this afternoon and evening present Charles E. Blaney's funny farce comedy, "A Baggage Check." The play is on the order of "The Millionaire" by playwrights before, except by a writer who tried to build a melodrama. The play is not guilty of any "deep dyed" plot, but the story running through it is that of a very funny man who came into control of a laundry by finding a "baggage check" and who has to do a great deal of business methods as the average comedian knows about horse-shoeing. The cast is headed by the following well-known clever comedians: Grapewin & Evans, the most original in their line of business and who, for the past two seasons, have been the leading artists with "A Railroad Ticket" and "Frank Daniel's Comedy Company."

All who enjoy a good, hearty laugh at good, clean comedy should attend the performances of "A Baby's Red Stocking" at the Davis theater Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday next. The piece was written for laughing purposes only, and the author, George S. Brown, has accomplished his aim. There is nothing in "A Baby's Red Stocking" that borders on suggestiveness, but everything said or done is funny and clean. The plot of the piece hinges on the finding of a small fortune in a baby's red stocking, and the complications this fortune gets in possession into very laughable. The company directed by H. E. Hedges, that sweet and clever little soubrette, Miss Alice Hanson, who is supported by Bryant and Richmond, Dan Waldron, Mabel Dorrille and the original "When, Why and Where" company.

From advance comments upon "The Princess of Bagdad," which will serve to bring Margaret Fuller before the Scranton audience at the Frothingham for the second time next Tuesday evening, play-goers are to witness an unusually interesting piece of stage-work. It is peculiar in three days of plays based upon the vagaries of the new woman, the woman with a past and the erring and unfaithful wife. In this, that it is clean and wholesome. The peculiar triumph of the author of this play, is that there is not a dull moment in the whole time of enactment. With strength of situation and novelty of plot, it turns upon the struggles and fortunes of a young girl, pure, sweet, noble in character and high in aim.

That great comic-opera success, "El Capitán," with elongated DeWolf Hopper and his splendid organization, including pretty little Edna Wallace, statuesque Nella Brown, the new and handsome soprano of the company, clever Alice Hosmer, Edmund Stanley, the popular tenor; Alfred Klein, the diminutive comedian, and many others equally well known, will be the attractive magnet at the Frothingham on Wednesday evening. The score of this charmingly picturesque and delightfully melodic comic-opera, is from the pen of that eminent composer and musician, John Philip Sousa, whose inspiring marches have made his name a household name and which at the present time are heard in every city and town in this country and Europe.

All Scranton remembers the Sages, whose brilliant created such a furore here last season. They will be at the Academy of Music next week. A recent issue of the Reading Herald says of them: "The reputation of the Sages precedes them and their appearance at the Academy of Music, last evening, was an ovation. From start to finish they gave a jolly and rollicking performance and the stage was filled with youthful aspirants in the realm of hypnotism. One of the acts that called forth shouts of applause was the placing of a young man under hypnotic influence and then inviting three physicians to step upon the stage. Drs. S. L. Kurtz, Charles W. Bachman and J. Y. Hoffman were selected by the audience. One held the right pulse, one the left and one watched the heart action. The first time they held their hands normally, the pulse being 80. Then Dr. Kurtz took the right pulse, Dr. Hoffman the left and Dr. Bachman the heart. After the minute had expired Dr. Bachman said the heart was still beating normally. Dr. Kurtz had registered 128, but Dr. Hoffman had only counted 72 beats for the left pulse.

Dr. Sage told the audience to look up the matter and ascertain how it was done. This practical demonstration was a convincing one. The subjects, numbering nearly 75, were put through an immense variety of funny poses and "the stunts" were a very entertaining innovation. The cinematograph pictures far surpassed the expectations of the spectators and the military ones had to be repeated before the audience would be satisfied."

A STRONG MELODRAMA.

"A Fatal Card" Presented at the Frothingham Last Night.

The "Fatal Card" was the attraction at the Frothingham theater last evening and a fair-sized audience appreciated and applauded the several of the very strong climaxes in this very strong melodrama. While the quality of the entertainment was sufficient to attract lovers of melodrama, it was not the only inducement last evening. The West Side Athletic, for whose benefit the show was produced, were present together with their many friends throughout the city. Hyde Park society was especially well represented by the presence of the very conspicuous in the body of the house and occupied several boxes. The theater was handsomely decorated in red and black, the club's colors, and also with bunting and American flags. The company though not identically the same as was here last year, was nevertheless very capable and competent, and all who shall attend the matinee and evening performances today will witness an excellent interpretation of the story. Mr. Charles Steadman in the role of George Forrester, afterwards Marable, the father of Margaret Marable, and Mr. J. W. Ward in the role of Walter Hedges, life among the mining camps and taverns of the Rocky Mountains, is so realistically depicted in story and illustration as to suggest the colors, and also "Man's Gulch," and "Luck in Roaring Camp," etc.

Activities are shifted in the second act to the valley of the Thames and the City of London, where they continue until the iniquitous lives of the miners begin in the Rocher have spent their day. The mountains should become involved in love affairs in London society may be somewhat mysterious, but is apparent when we learn that one of the natives of England and left their families at the same time that they wandered from their homes. There is apparently a surfeit of border drama tragic scenes in the first act, but are quite tolerable under the artistic acting of Mr. Charles Steadman and Walter Hedges. A Caroline Cooke as Margaret Marable, is a charming woman, and give inspiration to the work of her father, George Marable. The real love scenes with bits of comedy interwoven are cleverly produced by Richard C. Bennett as Harry Burgess, and Anna Vislaire as Cecile Austen.

"JIM, THE PENMAN."

Well Presented at the Academy of Music Last Night.

An excellent production of Sir Charles Young's new farce "Jim the Penman" was witnessed by a crowded house at the Academy of Music last night. The drama was presented by a strong company with F. C. Bang's at the head, playing the title role. Clement S. Martin as "Barn Hartfield," W. J. Ashley as "Johnnie" and Edward Emery as "Captain Redwood," were especially deserving of mention. Marie Edith Rice made an excellent Mrs. Ralston and shared the honors with the male star of the company, Mr. Bangs.

ASSAULTED THE OFFICER.

Slapped Patrolman Parry's Face When Told to Move On.

Albert Mohr, of the South Side, was arrested at 3 o'clock yesterday morning on Lackawanna avenue, but the officers had a lively tussle with him before making him in the lockup. He was drunk, disorderly and in a fighting mood. Patrolman Parry first ordered him to move on, and he received a blow in the face, certainly he did not intend to. May came to his assistance. Mohr threatened all sorts of disasters to the policemen when they were taking him to the lockup. He paid a fine of $20 in police court, imposed by Mayor Bailey.

THREE SENT TO JAIL.

Mayor Bailey Fined a Trio Who Could Not Settle and Up They Went.

Andrew Williams, picked up on Lackawanna avenue for drunkenness, was fined $2, could not pay, and was sent to jail for ten days. James Gray, of the West Side, was lying down drunk on the Hyde Park bridge at 2.10 a. m., and when he was arrested he said it didn't matter, he'd get out, he had a pull. He got twenty days. Frank Russell, a hobo, picked up for begging money on Franklin avenue, arrested by Street Officer Wickenhoffer, was sent up for ten days.

FATHER MCCOURT'S FUNERAL.

KOEHLER FORMALLY COMMITTED TO JAIL

He Was Given a Hearing Before Alderman Millar.

DEAD MAN'S BROTHER TESTIFIED

He Swore That Koehler Fired the Shot While His Brother Was Sitting Up in Bed, and That No Words Passed Between Them Before the Shooting--Another Man Who Was Sleeping in the Same Room Gave Testimony.

Constable Max Koehler was given a hearing at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon before Alderman Millar on the charge of murdering John, brother known as Frank, Kerycki, at Piceburg at 2.30 last Monday morning, and after hearing the testimony of Coroner Longstreet, Deputy Coroner Penny-packer, Alex Kerycki, brother of the murdered man, and Constant Shukinski, who was sleeping in the room where the shot was fired, Alderman Millar committed Koehler to jail without bail to await trial in court.

The prisoner was brought handcuffed to the alderman's office by Keeper W. G. Ward. The few days of his incarceration have whitened, almost bleached, his face, and he appeared to have suffered much mental torture. It was extremely galling to him to find himself in such a grave predicament, and the center of many curious eyes while the case was going on.

District Attorney John R. Jones appeared for the commonwealth and Koehler was represented by ex-Judge W. C. Ward and Attorney Thomas P. Duffy. County Detective Leysdon had on hand a large number of witnesses, but only as many were sworn as were necessary to make out a prima facie case, to warrant the alderman in holding the prisoner for his appearance at court.

DEPUTY CORONER SWORN.

Deputy Coroner Penny-packer was the first one sworn. He was present at the post mortem examination and assisted Coroner Longstreet. There was a pistol shot wound in the man's abdomen on the median line about two inches below the lower end of the breast bone. The external appearance of it was powder burned and the undershirt the man had on was jagged where the bullet had gone through it. Dr. Kennedy, of Piceburg, had taken out the bullet before the man died. The witness said the pistol wound caused Kerycki's death.

Alex Kerycki, the dead man's brother, was next sworn. He is a young man, apparently not over 21 years of age. He cannot speak English and Martin Woyshner was sworn as interpreter. The witness said he knows Koehler only by sight. He was in the bedroom sleeping in the same bed with his brother, John, when Koehler came in last Monday morning about 2 o'clock. Koehler took John by the shoulder, raised him up, and without as much as a word shot him.

The brother threw his arms around the witness's neck and was crying. He said "I'm killed" and then he lay in bed, stretched on to the other bed in the room, stretched on to the floor, then got up and ran down stairs, where he did not hear the shooting. He said the witness to keep still or he'd get the same thing.

ON CROSS-EXAMINATION.

Attorney Duffy cross-examined Kerycki. The witness could not remember how many were in the room at the time the shooting occurred. He knew that Koehler shot John, and another boarder was asleep in the other bed in the room. He said his brother was drunk when Koehler came into the room. The witness could not remember how many were in the room at the time the shooting occurred. He knew that Koehler shot John, and another boarder was asleep in the other bed in the room. He knew that Koehler shot John, and another boarder was asleep in the other bed in the room. He said his brother was drunk when Koehler came into the room.

COURSE OF THE BULLET.

Dr. Longstreet was the last witness sworn, and he described the course of the bullet. The external appearance of the bullet, he said, was that of a downward course toward the left back. It ran about to the left lobe of the liver, wounded the colon or large intestine and struck one of the kidneys. It struck the crest of the pelvic bone, deflected a little, and stopped under the skin of the back. The abdomen was filled with blood, the wound was necessarily fatal, and it was surprising that Kerycki lived as long as he did.

BOARD OF TRADE BANQUET.

Its Details Were Discussed at a Joint Committee Meeting. There was a joint meeting yesterday of the banquet and manufacturers committees of the board of trade for the purpose of discussing the arrangements for the approaching banquet which will formally open the board's rooms in the new Board of Trade building.

The banquet committee members are E. L. Fuller, chairman; T. Cramer, Tom Stovall, E. G. Gourson, Charles Schlotz and C. H. Bond. The menu was discussed in a general way and $1,000 approximately decided upon as the amount of money to be expended. It was left to Mr. Fuller to draft a menu in detail and to give preference to proposals from local caterers. The menu is to be an elaborate one. The new rooms were visited by the committee. Two hundred persons can be seated at table.

THE KINSLEY INVESTIGATION.
