ANTHRACITE TRADE'S PRESENT CONDITION

Operators at the Mercy of Unreliable Sales Agents.

OUTLOOK IS NOT REASSURING

Coal Operators' Association Charges That the Industry is Grossly Mismanaged--Railroads on Unstable Foundations Carrying Undemanded Coal in Order to Bolster Up Their Seeming Prosperity--Reaction Will Come.

The coal trade is at present in a discouraging state so far as the operators are concerned. If the opinions of the producers go for anything prices in the immediate future will hardly approach even the low average of October. It is claimed that early last month the sales agents blundered and overestimated the November and December demand with the result that many of the coal carrying roads glutted the market. The Anthracite Coal Operators' association in its report of Dec. 1 claims there has been gross mismanagement. In the early part of November, says the report, the sales agents, with that acumen for which they are noted, saw a great expansion in the market for coal, and concluded that it would absorb 1,500,000 tons. The mines began working on that basis and in a few days the railroads had so much coal on hand that there was no place to put it. Sales were slow and prices on the decline, while stocks were increasing. Then some of the roads with a keener sense of equity and honor than the others, ordered their colliers to shorten their trips as to reduce the output and maintain a fair price. Others, however, have been forcing their product on the market and there is no reason to hope that November and December prices will reach even the low average received in October. It is estimated that 3,500,000 tons it would even have exceeded the actual demand. To have estimated it at one million tons in excess of the market is a heavy increase in both tide-water and line stocks during October, shows the utter incapacity of the sales agents, while the present condition of the trade bears most damaging witness to the puerility of their efforts to upset the immutable law of supply and demand.

SALES AGENT THE AUTOCRAT.

No other great industry in these United States is so grossly mismanaged as the coal trade. The sales agents wish for large tonnage, and it is manifestly more to their profit, and to the profit of all the commission houses depending upon them, to have many tons, even at a low price, than a smaller number of tons at a higher price. Their commission is the same in either case, and all holders of securities in coal-carrying railroads, are more vitally interested in receiving a higher price for their stock, without so much regard to the number of tons. Each acre of coal land contains a fixed amount of coal, and its value depends entirely upon the price which the sales agent chooses to sell it for. If he sells for a high price and exhausts it slowly, then the land has a greater value as an investment, but when, in order to secure a large tonnage and the consequent commissions he sacrifices the coal for a low figure he is degrading every right which the security holder in such property, by depreciating its value and destroying the foundation of the securities.

While the sales agent himself in many cases may not secure a direct profit in commissions from a larger tonnage, it would be interesting, and undoubtedly very instructive, to know the relationship between the commission houses which handle the coal, and the railroads who looked into it. If this power was used to further the general welfare of the regions as it should be, great good might be accomplished. Instead, it is like the selfish, petty warfare of the feudal lord, each trying to support his own people and his neighbors. The coal-carrying railroads stand on an unstable foundation, and it is to be expected that where they are in such absolute control they shall try to create sufficient revenue to make good heavy deficits in other accounts. The assertion that some of the coal-carrying railroads stand on an unstable foundation is pertinent, since the methods now being employed to bolster them into a state of seeming prosperity will, before long, react disastrously on all of the interests involved. The product of this may easily be found by ascertaining the amount of unmined coal owned or controlled by each of the roads, and the figures collected with great care by William Griffiths, it is shown that only three of the eleven coal-carrying railroads have sufficient coal lands remaining to insure them a tonnage for over one hundred years. The other eight roads will exhaust their resources in periods varying from nine to sixty-three years.

WHERE'S THE SINKING FUND?

Without implying doubt as to the accuracy of these figures, there are certain conditions which materially reduce the time during which most of the railroads will be able to mine and transport coal at a profit. The opening of new mines will involve a heavy delay of money, and with increasing depth the coal will cost more. Every item of expense will become greater, and the rapidly increasing output of the cheaper bituminous coal, anthracite will likely have to be sold for less money, or not at all, than as a by-product of a limited number of purposes. To meet this future how many of the railroads have been maintaining a sinking fund to reimburse their capital account when this source of great revenue is exhausted?

There is, in the present condition of the coal trade, such an entire absence of business foresight and, in many cases, of commercial integrity, that it is almost a matter of surprise that the past months of 1896 have shown an improvement over the reckless course followed in 1895. For such a change the sales-agents are congratulating themselves. By means of an erudite arithmetical calculation they prove to their own satisfaction that they have not sent to market more than their due proportion of coal, and adding up their figures prove, further, that there is no excess over the amount which it was estimated the market would require. The application of the time-honored rule of five principles in arithmetic shows, however, that as a matter of fact they have largely exceeded the needs of the market; that stocks have increased at tide-water, and are unusually heavy along the lines, and that they have, through this continued excessive production, been forced to keep up that transparent game of "blowing" the public with a fixed "circular" price, while the actual sales are made from forty to fifty-five cents and more below it.

It has been stated in all earnestness that the sales-agents could not maintain circular prices because of the legal obstacles. The incorrectness of such reasoning is easily shown by reference to any of the great industries. They are not combinations in any sense of the word, but are following the underlying principle of a successful business in agreeing that if the market is overloaded the price will decline to a point where operations cease to be profitable, and to prevent such a condition they gauge their output to the needs of the consumer. There is no industry which could more readily be adjusted than the anthracite mining trade. Its proper and legitimate conduct would be of vast benefit to the operator, carrying-roads and consumer, but until some course is followed such as has already been suggested by this association, of having a commissioner appointed who shall direct the affairs of the trade, there will be the same ruinous destruction of valuable interests that is going forward now. No sure remedy has ever been found that will cure a breach of faith. If it had, the anthracite interests could well be proud to stand for the possession of the formula, and it would no doubt be prescribed in allopathic doses.

GRAIN DEALERS' FAIL.

Sheriff Closes Duggan & Kennedy of West Lackawanna Avenue. Two executions were yesterday issued against William H. Duggan and Philip Kennedy, a well-known business man, under the firm name of Duggan & Kennedy. The first execution was for $4,000, and the second is for $1,500.00 in favor of John Reardon & Sons. Sheriff Clemons closed their place of business yesterday morning.

THE SCAFFOLD FELL.

Three Men Precipitated Twenty-nine Feet to the Ground and None Seriously Hurt.

By the falling of a scaffolding on the building in process of construction on Jefferson avenue near Spruce street, three men were tumbled to the ground at noon yesterday, and were injured. Their names are George Bailet, T. S. Lasford, and A. A. Kearney, all residents of Green Ridge. Bailet was the most badly hurt and was taken to the Lackawanna hospital, but his injuries are not serious. Lasford's head was cut and he met with some other injuries, but he is going home without assistance. Kearney kept on working as if nothing happened.

REYNOLDS-RICE WEDDING.

Took Place in Ashbury Methodist Church Yesterday Noon. The wedding of Miss Agnes Graham Reynolds and George Howard Rice took place at 12:30 o'clock yesterday in the Ashbury Methodist Episcopal church, Green Ridge, and was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. J. Pater Reynolds, on Sanderson avenue. The groom is native of Springfield, Mass., and an attorney of Globe, Arizona, and the bride a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Reynolds, of San Mateo Cal. She has lived with her grandmother in this city for several years.

The interior of the church was handsomely decorated with flowers. Rev. A. P. Chaffin, pastor of the church, pronounced the marriage rites. Miss Clara Reynolds was maid of honor and Misses Chauncey Reynolds and Emily Barré, of Kingston, were bridesmaids. The flower girls were Mary and Elizabeth Dickson. The groom's attendant was Frank E. Donnelly, of Wilkes-Barre. The bridesmaids were Misses of Plymouth: Hubert Reynolds, of Kingston; George McLean, of Wilkes-Barre, and H. D. Merrill, of this city. An Alfred Pennington, organist at Elm Park church, played the wedding marches.

The bride wore a white satin gown, trimmed with blue and white, and belonged to her great grandmother. She carried white roses. The maid of honor wore white silk, trimmed prettily with blue and white. The bridesmaids wore blue silk gowns, trimmed with white. They carried bouquets of violets. The church decorating was done by Platt Clark. The wedding breakfast at the home of the bride's grandmother was served at 1:30 o'clock by Huntington. Among the out-of-town guests were: Colonel and Mrs. G. Murray Reynolds, Mrs. Sheldon Reynolds, Mrs. Benjamin Reynolds, Misses Reynolds, George R. Bedford, Mrs. J. B. Bedford, Mrs. R. G. Hicketts, of Wilkes-Barre; Mrs. May Tubbs, of Kingston; Captain William Grant, of Tunkhannock; Mrs. Edith Grant, of Tunkhannock; Mrs. Edward Leighton and Miss Leighton, of Binghamton; Mrs. Benjamin Tubbs, of Kingston; Miss Emily dation is pertinent, since the methods now being employed to bolster them into a state of seeming prosperity will, before long, react disastrously on all of the interests involved. The product of this may easily be found by ascertaining the amount of unmined coal owned or controlled by each of the roads, and the figures collected with great care by William Griffiths, it is shown that only three of the eleven coal-carrying railroads have sufficient coal lands remaining to insure them a tonnage for over one hundred years. The other eight roads will exhaust their resources in periods varying from nine to sixty-three years.

RECEPTION AT CARLSRUHE.

Ex-Sheriff Robinson Entertains a Party of Friends at Maplewood. Ex-Sheriff Charles Robinson gave a reception at his cottage "Carlsruhe" at Maplewood yesterday to the members of the Pennsylvania Fish commission and a party of invited friends. They left on the 9 a. m. Erie and Wyoming train and returned at 4:30 in the afternoon. A day of enjoyment was spent at "Carlsruhe" and excellent fishing in Lake Erie helped to pass the time pleasantly.

Robinson's band was along and kept up a musical discourse all day. The members of the fish commission are H. L. Demuth of Lancaster; D. P. Corwin, of Pittsburg; James A. Dole, of York; J. W. Cowell, of Easton; S. B. Stillwell, of Scranton, and W. E. Mehan, associate editor of the Philadelphia Ledger, and secretary of the commission. They held stated meetings at regular intervals in the prominent cities of the state. Their meeting here was merely routine.

COULD NOT PAY THEIR FINES.

Quartette of Prisoners from Police Court Sent to Jail. Four prisoners were taken up to the county jail yesterday afternoon from police court. John Lamb went up for twenty days. He is 23 years old, a shoemaker, and hails from Springfield, Vt. He was arrested twice this week, Monday evening for striking in the face Shoemaker, who has a blind shop under the Valley house, for which offense he paid a fine of $3, and on Tuesday night for unbecoming conduct on Franklin avenue.

Michael McHale, of the South Side, was arrested on Lackawanna avenue for being drunk and begging money to get more liquor. He is 19 years old and will spend twenty days in jail. Wallace Dickson, a farmer from East Lemon, will spend ten days in duration. He was picked up drunk on the streets and when he was taken to the police station his feet were in such a condition of uncleanness that lime had to be sprinkled on them and his shoes and socks were cast into the sewer.

Mrs. Annie Williams, 64 years old, who said her home is in Wilkes-Barre, was unfortunate enough to get blind drunk and arrested. She will spend thirty days in jail. Mayor Bailey held police court.

MANY WRONGFULLY ACCUSED IN COURT

At Least This is the Finding of Yesterday's Juries.

SEVEN VERDICTS OF NOT GUILTY

Not a Single Conviction During the Whole Day--Cross-Accusations of Theft--Got Into Trouble While Visiting His Recent Wife--Other Matters in Quarter Sessions Court.

Seven verdicts of not guilty were returned in criminal court yesterday and in three instances the prosecutor was directed to pay the costs. A verdict of not guilty was returned against a man charged with stealing $20 from a caller, Arthur Lambert, of Clark's Summit, was returned not guilty. Another jury declared Patrick Gilbert innocent of the charge of assault and battery preferred by James Murphy, Jr., and directed the prosecutor to pay the costs. Bromitzov Kevitski was adjudged not guilty of assaulting and battering William Tarraskavitz and the jury directed the costs to be divided.

A verdict of not guilty was taken without evidence in the case of P. H. McGreover charged with assault and battery by Thomas McCabe, the prosecutor agreeing to pay the costs. A verdict of not guilty was taken in the case in which David H. Jones charged Henry Richardson with assault and battery, prosecution being withdrawn from the defendant agreeing to pay the costs. A jury directed Phoebe H. Quick to pay the costs in the case of assault and battery, which she failed to prosecute against James S. Quick.

HE PLEADED GUILTY.

Patrick Croly pleaded guilty of stealing boots from his employer, C. L. Teeter, and was sentenced by Judge Gunster to one month in the county jail.

Anthony Stockowitz was tried on a charge of larceny and receiving preferred by John C. Heffron, but the jury believed the story of the defense as outlined by Attorney M. J. Walsh and acquitted him. Stockowitz and Heffron worked a chamber together in Connel's mine. When they dissolved the partnership Heffron misused the bit of his drill and suspecting his partner of having taken it went to the partner's tool box and removed therefrom a bit which he identified as his own. He then had Stockowitz arrested and carried into jail where he remained for a month. In court yesterday Stockowitz swore that the bit which Heffron took from his possession was not his own (Stockowitz) and that it was Heffron and not he who was guilty of taking his neighbor's property. District Attorney Shuman prosecuted the case, assisted by Attorney M. J. Donahoe.

Carlton G. Palmer, the aged pension agent, a well known figure about the city, was indicted of a charge of assault and battery upon the person of Shuman, of Carbondale. Palmer's wife left him last August and went to live in a house in Carbondale where Shuman, a well known figure about the city, was living. Palmer went to see his wife in the hope of inducing her to return to his heart and hearth but she refused and when he avowed he would not leave without her, the occupying of the house had recourse to certain measures to compel him.

HE WAS LED OUT.

He says he was fired out bodily by Shuman. Shuman says he was led out gently. The jury concluded that he was led out and acquitted Shuman, placing the costs on the county. City Solicitor R. D. Stuart, of Carbondale, defended Shuman.

John Farrow and Thomas Judge, the former of Troop and the latter of Priceburg, were on trial at adjournment for assault and battery on a soldier named Jolock Rosenberg. The prosecutor alleged that on the night of the 21st of August while he was driving home from Blakely with a wagonload of apples Farrell and Judge jumped about a mile after the closing of parties who identified them as the defendants. They alleged that they neither assaulted him nor attempted to rob him, but merely jumped on his wagon and after a fight in eight years' home and that he slashed them with his whip and commenced yelling "stealers" they then jumped off. They alleged that Jolock Barron has a spite against them and that he incited Rosenberg to swear out warrants for them.

AMUSEMENTS.

The Sages and their wonderful feats in mesmerism have caused crowded houses at the Academy of Music all this week, and the crush will no doubt continue until after the closing performance Saturday night.

The entertaining and ever welcome Hermann, who is aided by Adelaide Herrmann, will be the attraction at the Frothingham next Monday evening for a single performance, his first appearance in this city in eight years. What constitutes the charm and imparts the success of Hermann's work is his admirable faculty of entertaining his audiences while performing his difficult feats of lizard-man with little comedy interpolations and bits of play-act that serves the double purpose of amusing his audience and attracting their attention from his nimble and expert sleight of hand work. It is a creation of the most poetical and fanciful nature. One of his most brilliant parts is furnished by Adelaide Herrmann, who has given to the world a new art. Her marvelous spectacular "Tolle de Danse" "Le Rayon du Soleil" and "The Lily of the Orient," have presented new and startling possibilities in the combination of color and motion.

The last three days of the week, commencing this afternoon, will be presented at the theater by the new sensational comedy drama, "Kidnapped," by D. K. Higgins. The play, besides being one of the most thrilling and exciting dramas in all kind of exciting incidents and bright comedy, and the audience never tires of applauding the different scenes. The plot, with its highly interesting drama with the abduction of a young and handsome heiress, who is kidnapped, one of the most realistic scenes of the play is a police raid was drawn by two spirited horses, dashing across the stage in full view of the audience. The prominent comedy role is that of a German duke, who is played by the author of the piece, D. K. Higgins, and the other parts are in the hands of well known performers. The play is mounted in the same lavish manner that marked its New York production.
