

WORLD OF LETTERS.

SOME NEW BOOKS.

Miss Lucretia Malet calls her latest novel, "The Curator" (Chicago: Herbert S. Stone & Co.) "a modern grotesque," and her publishers in their advance announcements assured us it would be a work of intense and continued interest...

McClure's this time is a fiction number, with short stories by Kipling, Frank Stockton and Maxwells, and other contents of this month's Forum are timely and forceful and the number merits a large sale.

But to make the planer, let us briefly unravel the thread of the story. It opens at a hotel near Lake Geneva, where one Leversidge--an Englishman who had "made his pile" in South African speculations and come home to lay it at the feet of the woman he loved--is staying in company with a friend, Anthony Hammond...

With "Fortune Made," a novel by Victor Cherbuliez, forms No. 265 of Appleton's "The World's Best Stories." It is a story full of Gallieisms but withal well told.

Sir Walter Besant can, when he wants to, turn out a capital story, and he evidently wanted to when he wrote "The City of Refuge" (New York: Fredrick Stokes, Inc., for sale in Scranton by H. B. Redburn).

With due respect to the always admirable contents of the Bookman, and especially on this occasion, to Professor Peck's paper on American political economy, the closing installment of "Kate Carnegie," the discriminating book reviews and the informing philanthropic purposes.

The first volume of a pretentious literary library in its field as yet unoccupied has appeared from the presses of the Appletons under the title "The Beginnings of a Nation: a History of the Sources and Rise of the English-Speaking Settlements in America with Special Reference to the Life and Character of the People." The author is Dr. Edward Eggleston.

There is a very hypothetical soul in the chief department of our Gotham name-sake. Witness how she intuitively weaves the words into Mr. Richard Le Gallienne for his later "Prose Fancies."

RILEY TALKS ABOUT NYE.

Mr. Russell M. Seely, of the editorial staff of the National Library, who first introduced James Whitcomb Riley to fame, has written for the Forum an account of a talk recently had with Mr. Riley concerning his former entertainment of a foot ball team of the future.

A FOOT BALL TEAM OF THE FUTURE.--Life.
