MR. WHARTON'S SPEECH. The speech of Joseph Wharton, president of the Bethlehem Iron company and permanent chairman of the meet-

One of the most important duties to be performed by the legislature of Permsylvania at its session which is to begin two weeks from today is the election of a man to succeed Mr. Cameron as a representative of this great state in the legislate States compared.

United States senate,
It is conceded that this new senator shall be a Philadelphian, and though we as citizens cannot vote directly for any one, having transmitted our rights in this one, naving transmitted our rights in this respect to the senators and representatives whom we sent to the legislature, we retain the right to express our opinions concerning the candidates in any orderly manner that pleases us. We have chosen to come together this evening, so to express ourselves.

to come together this evening, so to express ourselves.

We all know that the wise and diligent performance of duty as a United States senator requires great natural ability, supplemented by adequate training and by willingness to labor. The full powers of many of the greatest men that our country has produced have been taxed to their utmost in the forum of the United States senate. The full powers of our wisest and best are now demanded, and are not more than sufficient for properly representing our state in that great arena. Yet we all believe that our city possesses not one man only, but several men to whom we could safely commit the inner, ests of our state in the debates and struggles that are to occur there.

We have men whose intellect can grasp the problems that must come before the senate, men whose training in the legal choice.

Mr. Penrose, it may be at once carceded, lacks some of the sallent qualities of Mr. Wanamaker. He has no been victorious over a host of feeble competitors in the strife of trade, no M. Gazzam, Thomas W. Bray, Rufus E. Shapley, Richard L. Ashhurst, John E. Hanifen, Joseph H. Rhoads, Howard Atkinson, Owen J. Gallagher, William S. Blight, George Brooks, Robert H. Cuniffe, Ellicott Fisher, Joshua Garsed, Julius Schwarz, S. Emlen Meigs, H. L. Mendenhall, James B. Pratt, Edwin S. Stuart, James M. Pratt, Edwin S. Stuart, James M.

him for this high the senator?
First. It is, I think, a distinct advantage that he is not engrossed by commercial business, and also that he is not encumbered by great wealth. It suffices that he has known how to manage his affairs and those of his clients, and that his means are adequate to free him from small cates. small cares.

PENROSE'S QUALIFICATIONS. lask the interest of his state or of the nation might impose upon him. Obviously he could serve his state better at Washington, because he has served her well at Harrisburg. Upon the vital question of honest money, Mr. Penrose is thorougally sound. In the defense of our domestic industries by suitable protective import duties upon foreign goods, our state would find him an able and efficient champion.

Because I consider Boles Penrose better fitted than John Wanamaker by training and experience, and by his position in life, for this particular task of representing Pennsylvania in the United States senate, I advocate his election that office,

PENROSE SPEAKS. After two other speeches Senator

Penrose himself appeared on the stage and received an unexampled ovation. This is what he said:

and received an unexampled ovation. This is what he said;

I would indeed be insensible if I did not deeply appreciate the cordial and generous indorsement of my candidacy for the United States senate by this splendid meeting. When I see the representative business men and prominent cuitzens here tonight who have expressed their approval of my candidacy by acting as officers and vice-presidents of this meeting. I realize the grave responsibility I shall owe to the vast business interests of our great manufacturing state in the event of my election to this important office.

I cannot but be touched by the evidences of friendship and support of the old soldiers of our state as shown by their numerous and brilliant representation here tonight. Over thirty years ago the American soldier comprised the youth and patriotism and chivairy of our land. The memories of those who perished in the civil war are enshrined in the memory of a grateful people, and the survivors of the conflict with veneration and respect. I have always been glad in my public career to serve the soldier when called upon, and I want to assure you old soldiers here tonight, that to the full extent of my strength and ability I shall always uphold inviolate those principles of American liberty and free government preserved to us by your heroism.

we have men whose intellect can grasp the problems that must come before the senate, men whose training in the legal profession or in business affairs and prepared them to judge these problems correctly, whose experience perhaps in legislation has educated them to the routine of legislative bodies and to ready performance of the functions devolving upon the members of such a body; men also whose high character, good judgment, and all-round common sense command the respect and confidence of their fellow citizens. They are not numerous, but they exist.

TWO CANDIDATES.

At this moment, however, only two candidates from Philadelphia are in the field, and as no others are likely to appear, no others need now be discussed. These two are, as you well know, John the senate of the active and stalwart Respublicans of Philadelphia, I can har lly find words to express adequately the sentiments I entertain for the magnificent indorsement given me at their hands.

I realize that among you are a very large number who have been comrades with me as fighting Republicans who have aided it bringing our party to such a glorious position that in November last in this city we gave the imprecedented majority of nearly 110,000 for McKiniey and Hobart.

The claims of Philadelphia for recognition at this time in the selection of the United States senator are recognized by the people of Pennsylvania. My own candidacy has been before the people for nearly a year. I have appealed directly to the people of this city without the support of patronage, with nothing to promise or to give, and I have today the free, veltratry and vigorous support of a considerate majority of the senators and representatives from this city. Inspired by the trust and confidence placed in me by them and by the great constituency they represent, I confidently appeal to the people of the state of Pennsylvania for support.

I fully realize the importance of the office of United States senator of Pennsylvania, and if I am elected I shall go to Washington with the determination to serve the people faithfully and industriously, and to labor zealously for those great issues now before our country.

The first duty of the next congress will be to enact such laws as will extend fair and adequate protection to American industry and thus restore comfort and happiness to the homes of the American workingmen. Pennsylvania particularly, with her wonderful transportation facilities by water and by rail, her cheap fuel, her iron, her many commercial products and her matural resources will then again resume the great industrial march, which is destined soon to make our magnificent commonwealth the manufacturing center of the world.

THE MERCHANT MARINE.

Our merchant marine should be en-

THE MERCHANT MARINE. THE MERCHANT MARINE.

Our merchant marine should be encouraged by proper legislation. We will then have at our command a host of hardy and courageous sailors, useful in time of peace and war. Our ships must be built at home! We have already shown that we can build ships better than those of England or any other country. Here, upon the shores of the Delawafe, where every necessary hatural condition exists, there should be developed and encouraged those great ship building industries for which we are already famous, and in which we should ship building industries for which we are already famous, and in which we should rival the world. The merchant marine sailing under the American flag was once found everywhere and dominated the commerce of the world. It, can and should be restored to its former splendid position. The American navy must be increased so that our government may under all circumstances maintain and enforce, if necessary, its proper position in its foreign relations. It is our duty to establish const defenses and adequate protection to our scaport eities in case or war. We should encourage, so far as we can, without disregarding the long-established American policies every brave people struggling for the same degree of liberty which we possess.

RESTRICTION OF IMMIGRATION

RESTRICTION OF IMMIGRATION. There is no advantage in transferring our shores the industries of Europe There is no advantage in transferring to our shores the industries of Europe if our American workingmen, for whose benefit they are brought home, are deprived of the opportunity to carn good wages, by the unrestricted immigration of the cheap laborers of Europe, often unfit or unwilling to assume the honors and responsibilities of American citizenship. Proper restrictions on foreign immigration are of the most vital importance to our people, and to the enactment of such restriction the Republican party is distinctly pledged in the last national platform, and proper legislation should be enacted at the earliest possible day in this direction. The principle involved lies at the foundation of American histitutions.

Our government depends absolutely upon the people for its conduct. It can only be maintained by preserving the intelligence and independence, and the manhood of the American citizen, and this cannot be done if the American workingman is to be degraded to the level of the putper labor of Europe. We must realize the dangers to this country from ignorance, communism and anarchy. Proper legislation must be effected where necessary to suppress those evils, and the public authority must be prompt, vigorous and determined in suppressing the disorders due to them when called upon.

PRESERVING SOUND MONEY.

PRESERVING SOUND MONEY. Never in our history did the American people so demonstrate their litness for free government as at the last election. By intelligent discussion throughout the length and breadth of this land the battle was fought, involving a difficult and complicated financial question, the American people demonstrated unmistakably their determination to maintain inviolate.

length and breadth of this land the battle was fought, involving a difficult and complicated financial question, the American people demonstrated unmistakably their determination to maintain involuing national honor, it will be the duty of the Hepublican party to preserve zealously the integrity of public and private credit opin a basis of sound money.

The great American principles of liberty and free government for which our forefathers made herole sacrifices should be zealously upheld by us. The traditions of American patriotism should be preserved, it has been remarked that the few great nations of history have had their distinctive trait, and that each has made its particular contribution to the progress of mankind. The Greek had the genius of art, the inspiration for the beautiful; the Roman founded law and government, the Hebrew contended for the conception of one God, and from this nation were uttered the eternal truths of Christianty which constitute the religion of civilized mankind, America also, the last product of time, has her glorious mission in the development of a splendid American citizenship, representing the highest individual intelligence, cultivation and well being of the masses of the people that the world has ever seen. The American citizenship, representing the houst the American diagram, man or woman, clucated in the public schools over which floats the American diagram, and within which is the open libbe, possessing an opportunity to earn by honest toil a comfortable living, participating intelligently in the government of the country, represents a new type of civilization.
