It also contains a provision which will cause the verdict of disbarment to be removed after June 1, 1896, which will be two years from the date of his disbarment.
 Floyd M. Marshall, a novelty advertising man and quite well known in Scranton, died recently in Philadelphia. His wife was a Scrantonian. Miss Mary Katzwinke, he and Mrs. Marshall resided here last summer with Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Katzwinke, who attended his funeral in Philadelphia. The remains were taken to Chessing, Mich., for interment.
 Emma Spencer, by her next friend, Reuben N. Laffar, and through Attorney R. B. Price, yesterday filed an amendment to the proceedings against her husband, Andrew D. Spencer, asking absolute divorce instead of separation and alimony as was first petitioned for. In her declaration she states that they were married in Trenton, N. J., and lived together until April 6 of last year, when he deserted her after abusing her.

NOTABLE WEDDING IN HONESDALE

Miss Katharine R. Torrey Married to Edward F. Ross, of Chicago.

A FASHIONABLE SOCIAL EVENT

Ceremony Took Place in the First Presbyterian Church—Was Attended by a Large Assemblage of Prominent People—Bride and Her Maids Attired in Handsome Gowns. List of the Guests.

In the First Presbyterian church in Honesdale at noon yesterday Miss Katharine Rebecca Torrey, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Torrey, of Chicago, and Edward Floyd Ross, of Chicago, were united in marriage by Rev. W. H. Swift, pastor of the church in which the ceremony occurred. The event was one of the chief social occurrences in this section of the state for several months past.

Many relatives and friends of the contracting parties were present and these, together with about one hundred and fifty prominent residents of Honesdale and that vicinity assembled in the elaborately decorated church at a few minutes before twelve o'clock, awaiting the arrival of the bridal party. The gathering was a representative one, reflecting the most exclusive local and out of town society.

It was just two minutes to twelve when the carriage of the party, drawn up in front of the main entrance of the church, and a few moments later the procession of the bride's party down the central aisle had begun. At the chancel they were met by the groom and his best man, Joseph Tompkins, of Brooklyn, who had entered through the chancel door.

The entire party was received at the chancel by the Rev. Swift. The procession was in the following order: First came two little pages, Frances Jermyn, of Scranton, and Master R. Hamilton Torrey, nephew of the bride. The former was daintily attired in a dress of white organdy and bore a bouquet of white carnations. Following the pages came the four ushers, John H. Torrey, brother of the bride; H. Blossom and C. R. Dittmars, all of Brooklyn, and E. F. Torrey, brother of the bride, of Clinton, N. Y.

Immediately after the ushers came the four bridesmaids in the following order: Miss Katharine Stanton, of Honesdale, and Miss Mary Wells, of Cantonville; Miss Harriet Stanton, of Honesdale, and Miss Clara Torrey, of Honesdale, wore certain broadcloth, trimmed with embroidered chiffon and velvet. The costumes of the latter two were of a darker tint than those of the former. All wore black velvet Gainsborough hats and in muff, which matched their gowns, carried large bunches of violets.

Next came the maid of honor, Miss Frances Beatrice Hunter, of New York City, who proved a charming little personage in her attire of white muslin and pink silk. Asparasus, ferns and pink carnations composed her bouquet. Following her came the bride, leaning on the arm of her father.

CHARMINGLY ATTACHED BRIDE.
 Miss Torrey was charmingly attired in white beaded satin, trimmed with Duchess lace. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley which flower comprised the boutonniere worn by the bride's father and the ushers who were attired in frock coats with grey trousers, yellow gloves and silk hats.

The ceremony was the usual Presbyterian ritual and the bride was given away by her father. The organ was played by Miss Emma C. Ward, of Honesdale. As a prelude she rendered an overture from Buck, a gavotte by Jeffrey, the Tocatta by Dubois and the wedding march by Dudley Buck. As the procession toward the chancel was in progress the well known notes of Wagner's Lohengrin were heard. After the conclusion of the services in the church, the bridal party, together with about one hundred and fifty invited guests, were conveyed to the residence of the bride's parents on Main street. The bride received in the library under the canopy of smiling and roses. A reception ensued, during which a wedding repast, by Allen, of Newark, was served. Bauer's orchestra, of Scranton, was stationed on the second floor and discoursed music at intervals.

The gifts were very numerous and as tasteful and valuable as they were beautiful. The gift of the bride to the bridesmaids were gold hat pins, set with rubies, and the gift of the groom to the best man and ushers were gold linked buttons, with laces.

At a late hour in the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Ross left for an extensive tour, after which they will reside in Chicago, in which city Mr. Ross is the resident representative of several eastern manufacturers.

SOME OF THE GUESTS.
 Those present from out of town were: Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Jermyn, the Misses Jermyn, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Jermyn, Mrs. George Jermyn, Frances Jermyn, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Weston, Mr. W. R. Storrs, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Torrey, and Miss Mary Torrey, of Scranton; Mrs. W. S. Torrey, and Miss Jeanette and Master Hamilton Torrey, Mr. Dittmar, Mr. Blossom, and Mrs. John H. Torrey, of Brooklyn; Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Torrey, Jr., of Clinton, N. Y.; Mr. Atkinson, of

BE READY MONDAY

Finishing Touches Being Put on the Decorations.

DESCRIPTION OF THE NEW ROOMS

No. 1 is so changed in Appearance That No One Would Recognize it at First Glance—Superior Court Will Have a Very Elaborate Department—No. 3 is Neat and Tasty—Acoustics are Perfect and Ventilation and Heating is the Most Modern.

Contractor Schroeder and Architect Lacey yesterday gave the county commissioners positive assurance that the main court room and old No. 2, which is to be known as No. 3, will be ready for occupancy next Monday. On the strength of this assurance the under way to have the three weeks' session of common pleas court, which begins on that day, held in these rooms.

A small army of carpenters, artists, painters, mechanics, plasterers and iron workers, laborers and scrub women are at work putting on the finishing touches throughout the building. In the court rooms which are being pushed to completion with as much haste as is possible, four painters work on each scaffold and four scrub women are sweeping, dusting and mopping in the rooms. The arrangement of the second floor, the district attorney's suit of rooms, grand jury room, law library, jury rooms and closets on the third floor each has its squad of workmen as busy as bees, hustle, bustle and din being everywhere.

MAIN COURT ROOM.

The scaffoldings in the main court room have been entirely removed and yesterday for the first time an idea could be gained of what it will look like when entirely completed. Ionic columns—fluted pilasters with decorated caps—half imbedded in the wall, support a secondary frieze, and about that is the primary frieze, heavy, but plain. The distance between the top of the columns and the ceiling is about twelve feet, and this space is finished in buff. The lower portion of the walls is of a very pleasing salmon tint. The woodwork is oak finished in natural colors. The ceiling is the crowning feature of the room. It has four massive false beams, each five feet deep, measuring the length and breadth of the room and forming in the center, where the old circle of allegorical monstrosities was wont to dazzle the eye of the rustic juror and witness, a quadrangle half the size of the entire ceiling which is relieved only by the steel relief work on the beams themselves and there is but little of the ornamental in that.

COLORING OF THE CEILING.
 Two shades of buff are the only coloring on the ceiling. So careful was the designer to avoid anything bearing the semblance of the old rainbow effects that he caused the colored glass to be removed from the smaller windows which surmounted the main windows on either side of the entrance. The ceiling is four feet higher than it formerly was and the acoustic properties are well nigh perfect. Even now, bare of carpets and furniture the hammering of the carpenters falls to produce an echo. The columns and false beams are responsible for the greater needed change. The floor will be covered with sardine, which is being manufactured especially to match the colors of the room.

New No. 3 is strikingly plain but rich. It is finished in buff and ornamented with some simple frescoing around the entrance.

The superior court room, No. 2, as it will be hereafter known, is glibly as compared with the others. Heavy twin columns of imitation ebony, elaborately bequeered ceiling and lightly ornamented transverse, false beams on the ceiling are the only features of note. The floor will be covered with sardine, which is being manufactured especially to match the colors of the room.

Judge Archibald's room has also been beautified by flat decorated ceiling and tinted walls and the other chambers are to be likewise touched up.

THAT NEW ROOF.
 The big improvement, however, is in the roof. Beauty had to be sacrificed to practicality, but then, without it is not so prominently wanted when the eye becomes accustomed to its seemingly disproportionate appearance. First of all the architect strengthened the side walls with massive iron girders, forming a sort of rim on which to rest the roof. The roof was then built, Mr. Lacey expressed it, that it might be blown over on the West coast, and yet be intact. Even to a layman the bewildering network of girders, stringers, beams, counters, braces, rods and what not of that description gives an impression of infinite stability. Engineers who have examined it, and some of the best in the country have been brought here to pass upon it, have one and all declared it to be a masterly work and as near perfect as is possible in a remodeling job.

The heating and ventilating apparatus is so arranged that the air in any room or in the building, for that matter, can be changed in ten minutes. All in all it reflects great credit on the progressiveness of our county commissioners, the skill and taste of the architect, and the workmanship and push of the builder. All the improvements in the building and beautifying of the court house grounds, will cost in the neighborhood of $115,000.

SUIT AGAINST THE O. & W.
 Carbonade Woman Wants $25,000 For Being Run Down.
 A suit for $25,000 damages was yesterday instituted against the New York, Ontario and Western Railroad company by Attorney L. F. Wedeman at the instance of Mrs. Margaret Kennedy, of Carbonade, who was struck by an engine of the defendant company at the Belmont street crossing, Sept. 23, 1896. Since then she has been unable to hold her skull fractured and that she suffered internal injuries for all of which she feels she should be compensated by the company as it maintained no watchman at the crossing and no signal of the approaching train was given.

 The message will not be an exhaustive document; such a one will be written for April. The present one will be a resume of the needs of the various city departments and will contain the mayor's recommendations.
 It is believed that the present time is opportune as its reading will precede the work of the joint estimates and appropriations committee.

DEATH OF S. E. ACKERLY.

Was a Merchant of the North End and Olyphant.
 S. E. Ackery, a well known proprietor of meat markets in the Providence section of this city and in Olyphant, died yesterday morning at his home in Olyphant. He was 52 years of age.
 The funeral will take place tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock at Justice, where interment will be made.

OLD RESIDENT DEAD.

John R. Williams, One of the Early Day Reliants of the L. I. & C. Co., Passes Away.
 John R. Williams, one of Scranton's oldest residents of note, died at 5:30 o'clock yesterday morning at his home, corner of Webster avenue and Mills street.
 He was afflicted with a stroke of paralysis two weeks ago, and though a robust old man of 82 years, his advanced age made unavailing the strenuous medical effort to bring about his recovery. He died peacefully after having borne his recent suffering with fortitude.

 Mr. Williams was the father of Arja Williams, David G. Williams, both of the Lackawanna Iron and Steel company, the former the secretary, and Mrs. Margaret Powell, of Clinton Place. The burial will take place at the residence at noon tomorrow and at Bellevue church an hour later. Burial will be made at Forest Hill cemetery.

The deceased here an important part in the early industrial history of Scranton and was one of the few old time residents of "Slocum Hollow," the early Scranton. He came to this city early in the forties and in 1846 had the distinction of rolling the first rail in the old rolling mill. Concerning his life and business during those years he always had a fund of reminiscences at his command and delighted to tell them.
 He was boss roller for the Lackawanna Iron and Steel company when he first entered its employment and was soon afterward given a foremanship. When the north mill was erected he was one of the superintendents of construction.

Throughout his connection with the company he was one of its most trusted employees. Few of the workmen have ever won greater popularity or respect than he. He encouraged his fellows, aided and relieved them when ever possible and in so doing became marked for his integrity and kindness. He modestly bore the reputation of having been one of the best practical rail makers in this region.
