The Residence of E. D. Lathrop I Visited by Burglars.

When the family of E. D. Lathron arose at their usual bour on Wednesday morning the windows in the library and Cining room were found wide open and also the door of the kitchen. It was at once evident from the appearance of these rooms that the house had been visited by thieves who had gained an entrance through the winlows. The door had been unlocked from within, so that they could more readily leave with their booty. The rooms had been ransacked, and the Hoor of the library was covered with papers taken from the secretary, Several dollars had been taken from t pocket book which was left upon the floor. A small amount of money was also taken from a lady's hand bag. The burglars could easily have carried away a countity of silverware and other valuable articles, but they were left on from the hallway so that only money and wearing apparel were taken

Chief Andrews has taken measures for apprehending the thieves who it is thought may be tramps and not professional burglars. The clothing taken may prove a means of identify-
